Labor Backs Subsidies; Sees Prices Going Wild

Food Will Treble In Six Months, Green Declares To Senate Group

Farm Bloc Defied

Labor pitted itself against the farm bloc yesterday and urged Congress to retain food subsidies as a necessary part of price control.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the Senate Banking Committee those seeking to outlaw subsidies preach a destructive and dishonest doctrine when they say "let the law of supply and demand control prices."

"The plain truth is," he declared, "the war has thrown our whole economy out of balance. Who can honestly claim that under abnormal war conditions, when half of our whole industry is mobilized for war production, there can be any semblance of balance between supply and demand?"

Double in Three Months

"If subsidies are outlawed," he said, "food prices will double within three months and treble in six months.

Like other witnesses appearing before the committee, he brought "his own statistics compiled from Government sources." Just as in the subsidy fight in June, no two sets of figures presented on wages and prices are ever identical and rarely comparable. The question most asked by committee members is: "Where'd you get your figures?"

Purely Seasonal Decline

The AFL chief asserted, however, "nobody can argue prices are going down when the cost of living index moved up 1 per cent last month." He said the decline reflected in the index during the summer was "purely seasonal."

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of CIO, insisted "charity for the consumer" was not the subsidy issue.

"The issue is whether you will permit subsidies to be used to hold down the cost of living, or whether you will allow prices to continue upward, with the almost certain result that this course will soon kick the lid off and destroy the last pretense of price control," he said. "If you vote subsidies down, you vote prices up."

'15-Minute Lunch' Mine Conferees To 'Dine' 2 Hours

Representatives of coal operators and miners meeting in Hotel Statler to work out a new wage agreeme t yesterday voted to adjourn the conferences daily for a two-hour lunch period.

Under the contract between Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes and United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis now governing Government operation of the mines, coal miners are allowed 15 minutes a day for lunch, causing the pact to be called, waggishly, the "dyspepsia contract."

Asked to explain the discrepancy, a UMW spokesman explained that 15 minutes of the conference lunch period would be used eating lunch, with the rest of the time consumed checking on the activities of operators remaining outside the conference. The conferees plan to meet from 10 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 2:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. daily.

4th Term Race Questioned

Kentucky Election Victory Spurs Republican '44 Hopes

By Robert C. Albright

Republican capture of Kentucky's Fourth Congressional district by a revolutionary 12,600 majority yesterday gave a fillip to GOP 1944 hopes across the Nation and led to open speculation on whether Franklin Roosevelt will be a fourth-term contender.

Tuesday's border State success, following early November Republican State and local victories in New York, Kentucky, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, left GOP leaders so cocksure of a national Republican tide that they claimed the next House at the very minimum.

Privately disconsolate, Democratic campaign spokesmen nonetheless publicly wrote off the special Kentucky election results as due to party factional and personal factors.

More significant than the Republican pick-up of a single House seat was the sudden revival of skepticism in both party camps as to the President's 1944 candidacy.

"Will he run now?" a question long since considered answered in orthodox Democratic circles, yesterday once again was a stock cloakroom query. Many an old line Democrat, who never previously doubted, confessed he

Best point-value news since rationing began was contained on the December charts released yesterday by OPA showing all beef cuts reduced, citrus fruit juices made point-free, and 12 other processed foods cut from 1 to 10 points per can or package.

Ready-to-serve soups also were removed from rationing, although tomato soup went up 1 point and increased values were given to all varieties of cheese, all rationed fish except oysters, and tomato sauce.

Pork cuts remained at the reduced levels made effective two weeks ago. Butter and margarin also were kept unchanged, as were nearly all lamb, mutton and veal items.

The new values will go into effect next Sunday. They represent the lowest points for meat, on the average, since rationing started. The average for all cuts will be slightly less than five points per pound, OPA said. This compares

New Mark-up Reduces Edible Bean Prices

The price of dry edible beans at wholesale and retail has been reduced up to 2 cents a pound as a result of new specific markups established between country shipper and wholesaler, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday.

In effect since November 27, dollars-and-cents markups have been substituted for former percentage markups. Another factor in the reduction is a cents-per-pound packaging allowance replacing an allowance per hundredweight.

Record Budget For D. C. Skips Tax Increases

Consolidation of Items Hailed as Progressive Step

By Margaret Davis

An all-time high District budget — $66,366,431 — was submitted yesterday to the Budget Bureau by District Commissioners, for consideration as the Annual Appropriation Act of 1945. It is expected almost to clear the District of debt obligations and calls for no tax increases.

Through rearrangement and consolidation, the budget includes for the first time numerous items previously contained in other acts, but even after subtracting these items the amount requested is $2,860,000 more than that of last year.

Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler hailed the new arrangement as "one of the most progressive fiscal steps taken by the District in half a century."

Previously, he said, "District Appropriation acts have just "grown up," a catch-all without order, with a number of blind spots, difficult to follow and hard to comprehend."

In round figures, including the new items, the estimate for this year is almost nine million more than that for last year.

The amount includes $3,800,000 in overtime and additional compensation increases due school teachers, policemen, firemen, and annual District employes in classified civil service positions. The money will be requested in a deficiency appropriation bill for the 1944 fiscal year.

It includes also: the United States Court fund of $625,000, previously included in the judiciary section of the United States budget and charged to the District; the Freedmen's Hospital item of $485,000 previously carried in the Federal Security section of the United States budget; within grade promotions prorated in 1944 amounting to $240,000; civil service retirement fund increases of $400,000 in line with liberalized retirement provisions of the act of January 24, 1942; and capital outlay increases of $875,000 to provide for such items as new sewers, purchase

Hurrying home with a little color book, "Uncle Sam at War," which he had just bought at a neighborhood 5 and 10 cent store, Robert E. Long, 5, was instantly killed yesterday by a heavy truck as he crossed the intersection at 4th and W sts. ne.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Long, 2015 4th st. ne., Bobby got a quarter from his mother, she related last night, and apparently was eager to begin coloring his book.

Police said that he was running across 4th st. at the crosswalk and that the trailer and truck were unable to stop in time. His mother, who was at home at the time, was notified by police later. Only at Casualty Hospital, where the body was taken, did she learn of the boy's death, she said.

The father, who is employed at the American Express Co. and also drives a taxicab, could not be reached immediately and learned of the tragedy when he returned from work late in the evening.

John J. Turner, 49, Negro, of 48 Jackson alley nw., the driver, was booked under a charge of "held for the coroner." He will appear at an inquest, police said, the date of which had not been set last night.

The child's funeral will be held Saturday at Chambers funeral home, but the hour had not been determined last night. The Longs have another child, 16-month-old Jimmy. An uncle, William Carnel, is in the Army.

8th Crushes Nazi Lines Past Sangro

Allied Air Support Heaviest in Entire Campaign; 'All-Out' Offensive Hinted

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Dec. 1 (AP).—Under the heaviest tactical air support of the entire Italian campaign, the British Eighth Army smashed through German defenses beyond fallen Sangro Ridge today while American troops of the Fifth Army fought forward 3 miles in the central sector, possibly heralding the start of an "all-out" Allied drive on Rome.

The Germans fought with desperation. Despite the demoralizing onslaught by hundreds of Allied fighters, fighter-bombers and bombers, the enemy troops clung to their positions until they were killed or captured in bloody hand-to-hand fighting. An Allied communique described Nazi losses as "very heavy."

"The Germans are offering very fierce resistance for every inch of ground," a military commentator said. He predicted they would make violent efforts to retake Sangro Ridge, the powerful eastern anchor of their winter line from which Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British, Indian and New Zealand infantry drove them yesterday after 48 hours of heavy, continuous fighting.

Beats Off Counterattacks

Already the Eighth Army had beaten off counterattacks as it fought up the Adriatic coastal plain toward the important seaport of Pescara, only about 20 miles away. One enemy counterthrust cut off a portion of Montgomery's spearhead that captured the town of Mozzagrogna, but fresh British units effected a rescue.

Enemy casualties mounted swiftly as low-flying Allied fighter-bombers carved a path for Montgomery's troops by blasting German concrete fortifications to bits. Eighth Army infantry methodically wiped out strongpoints that had been bypassed and encircled.

The three-mile American advance west of Montaquila, hacked out through elaborate Nazi defenses, enabled Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark to straighten out his Fifth Army lines and gained new valuable high ground for observation toward Cassino and a broad valley running from there to Rome.

Savage Aerial Support

Both land mines and barbed wire entanglements were employed on a lavish scale by the enemy in an attempt to halt the Americans here, but Clark's Salerno veterans clawed through. The Germans are not overlooking any trick, old or new, in their desperate resolve to hold their present line at least until Christmas.

A measure of the shattering aerial support accorded Montgom-

Price of Victory

Tarawa, bloodiest fight in Marine Corps history, cost the victors 1026 dead and 2557 wounded, and the total for the 76-hour campaign was almost as great as that for the six-month fight for Guadalcanal, the Navy announced yesterday.

Reporting the heavy toll suffered in taking the 2-mile-long atoll and cracking Japan's central Pacific defenses, the Navy said that casualties totalled 3772 in the three Gilbert Island operations. Sixty-five were killed and 121 wounded at Makin and one killed and two wounded at Abemama. Some Army casualties may be included in the figures, Navy officials said.

Japanese losses were estimated at 5700 by Navy officials at Honolulu.

(By comparison with the Gilbert Islands toll, American casualties in the landing of Salerno, Italy, last September and the first six days of fighting thereafter totaled 3497. The War Department announcement of the total did not break it down by killed, wounded and missing. Presumably, far larger numbers of troops were involved in the Salerno operation.)

The Navy made public the total without comment in a terse communique.

Reports from eye witnesses also had told of severe losses in which ill-luck played a part. Due to a shift in wind, some landing boats were caught on a reef, helpless, motionless targets for enemy gunners ashore.

Navy records show that from August 7, 1942, when landing operations began on Guadalcanal, to February 10, 1943, when the Navy announced the end of organized resistance there, the Marines lost 876 killed, 87 who died of wounds, 138 missing in action and 2675 wounded.

Under Police Guidance

700 Juvenile Gang Members Achieve Self-Reformation

By Adele Bernstein

While congressional committees, school authorities, citizens, and church and civic organizations have discussed the growing problems of juvenile delinquency, some 700 youngsters, in one of the toughest neighborhoods, under the guidance of a young policeman, recently tackled the problem themselves and, according to their former "victims," have met with astounding success.

Local businessmen, school principals and the policemen on the beat in the area bounded roughly by U and Euclid sts., and 3d and 10th sts. nw., agreed yesterday that "just a little intelligent guidance" for the kids who used to steal, break windows and generally terrorize the neighborhood has charged the situation there completely. And, they say, "it's all the kids' own doing."

"This used to be one of the worst neighborhoods in Washington," one business proprietor said yesterday, "with window breaking, pilfering and the like just part of every day.

"Conditions have improved amazingly in the last few months," he declared. "And we expect them to keep right on getting better."

The nearly 700 youngsters who have made a real contribution in one of the community's toughest problems range from 6 to 18 years old. Their homes in most cases are alley dwellings and slum houses which vie for space in the neighborhood with junk yards, lumber yards, hamburger stands and other businesses in the crowded section.

Less than a year ago, these kids were members of the juvenile gangs and "protective leagues" which preyed on citizens and property, stealing and destroying valuable goods and adding sexual immorality to their other practices.

Several months ago Patrolman Oliver A. Cowan, a young police officer whose beat includes this "little Chicago," undertook to stamp out the increasing hoodlumism by challenging the perpetrators to do as good a job at obeying the law as they did in breaking it.

Upon the advice of Capt. Charles J. P. Weber, Cowan's chief at the Thirteenth Precinct, he sought out the gang leaders in his spare time, inviting them to join up, gangs and all, to make the neighborhood a better place to live in.

Starting with two boys whose records had been particularly unsavory and who controlled large groups of young would-be gangsters, Cowan helped them organize what they call the Junior Police Corps.

Following is the full text of the agreement reached at the Cairo conference:

"PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Prime Minister Churchill, together with their respective military and diplomatic advisers, have completed a conference in North Africa.

"The following general statement was issued:

"'The several military missions have agreed upon future military operations against Japan. The three great Allies expressed their resolve to bring unrelenting pressure against their brutal enemies by sea, land and air. This pressure is already rising.

"'The three great Allies are fighting this war to restrain and punish the aggression of Japan. They covet no gain for themselves and have no thought of territorial expansion.

"'IT IS their purpose that Japan shall be stripped of all the islands in the Pacific which she has seized or occupied since the beginning of the first world war in 1914, and that all the territories Japan has stolen from the Chinese, such as Manchuria, Formosa, and the Pescadores, shall be restored to the Republic of China. Japan will also be expelled from all other territories which she has taken by violence and greed.

"'The aforesaid three great powers, mindful of the enslavement of the people of Korea, are determined that in due course Korea shall become free and independent.

"'With these objects in view the three Allies, in harmony with those of the United Nations at war with Japan, will continue to persevere in the serious and prolonged operations necessary to procure the unconditional surrender of Japan.'"

42 Planes Lost In Air Battles With Germans

27 U. S. Heavy Bombers Among Missing Craft; Nazi Toll Is 38

London (Thursday), Dec. 2 (AP).—Large formations of U.S. heavy bombers with their fighter escorts overcame stiff German fighter opposition to attack the Rhineland industrial city of Solingen yesterday while U.S. Marauders blasted German-controlled airfields in northern France and Belgium, it was announced early today.

Other Allied craft attacked a German aircraft works at Albert in France, targets in Holland and enemy shipping off the Brest Peninsula. A total of 42 Allied planes was missing from the operations, including 27 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, 1 light bomber and 14 fighters. The Allied forces accounted for 38 German planes in aerial combat, while 2 others were believed destroyed on the ground.

Fierce Aerial Battles

It was the second attack in two days for Solingen, site of Europe's largest light metal foundry. In the first attack on this city of 150,000 persons Tuesday the Americans lost two bombers, compared with the 27 missing from the second attack.

Returning pilots who fought their way to the target through icy, cloud-spattered skies, reported fighter combats were almost continuous over enemy territory, with the fiercest aerial battles taking place over Germany.

The Germans sent up some of their new Messerschmitt 410 fighter-bombers among other assorted types of fighters. The Nazis attempted to break up the bomber formations with rocket gun attacks.

The fighters which escorted the bombers shot down 20 German planes against a loss of seven of their own.

Jap Aggression Of 50 Years Built Empire

Holdings Form One of Greatest Domains in History

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Staff Writer

Fulfillment of the pledges made at Cairo by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and President Chiang Kai-shek will mean stripping Japan of one of the greatest empires ever put together.

In half a century of ruthless military aggression the Japanese have brought under their dominion nearly a quarter of the human race. They really began spilling out of their native islands, then a community of some 40,000,000 persons inhabiting some 148,000 square miles, in 1894, when they attacked China.

Before the stripping process got well under way they had overrun a total of about 3,000,000 square miles, embracing approximately 500,000,000 persons. These domains included Oriental possessions of the United States, Britain, the Netherlands and France. When the Cairo pledges are implemented they will be reduced to little more than the original 148,000 square miles of Japan, now supporting about 75,000,000 inhabitants.

Territory Ceded to Japs

The 1894 war against China resulted on April 17, 1895, in the treaty of Shimonoseki, which recognized the independence of Korea and ceded to Japan Formosa, the Pescadores Islands and the southern part of Manchuria (Manchukuo).

Japan encountered no effective opposition in moving into the islands she had taken from China, but was temporarily blocked from taking physical control of any territory on the mainland of Asia by a stern note from Russia, Germany and France, which warned the Japanese not to undertake any permanent occupation in Manchuria or Korea.

This frustration by the European powers rankled in Japan until, in 1904, they declared war against Russia largely because of Korea,

Nazis Hit Back With New Vigor As Russian Drive Is Slowed

London (Thursday), Dec. 2 (AP).—The Germans have struck out with new vigor on every sector of the Russian front in a major bid to stem the Russian offensive, counterattacking yesterday as many as 15 times in one area, and slowing the Red army to minor gains along the 600-mile front.

The intensity of the fighting was undiminished, equal perhaps to the heaviest of the war, but Moscow reported only a dozen populated places taken—a slowdown after four months of steady progress—all of them in three areas—north of Gomel, along the Pripet River and in the Dnieper River bend.

There was fighting in other sectors, but it won no mention in the Moscow communique recorded by the Soviet radio monitor here.

More than 2200 Germans were reported killed in the Dnieper bend, where in two areas the Russians and Germans struggled in see-saw fashion. At the Cherkasky bridgehead German counter pushes swirled against the Russians moving south toward Smela. All were repulsed, the Russians said.

Southwest of Kremenchug, German defenses were pierced for a local victory and the frantic Germans hurled 15 counterattacks to retrieve their positions. They failed.

Northwest of Gomel the Russians surged through intermediate German defense lines to capture several populated places.

To the south, in the Pripet River area, the Russians crossed the river and captured Narovl, 14 miles east of Yelsk.

The fighting all along the front appeared to be testing the reserve strength of both sides and both

Roosevelt, Churchill, Chiang Meet; Stalin Next

Grand-Scale Plan Mapped; President, Prime Minister to See Soviet Chief

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, in a dramatic war conference in North Africa, have approved a grand-scale plan for the defeat of Japan and have agreed to strip Japan of all the territory she has taken by "violence and greed" in a half-century of conquest.

The momentous agreement which will reduce Japan to what Axis geopoliticians scornfully call a "pigmy state" and make China the dominant power in the Far East, was announced in a communique issued by the White House at 7:30 o'clock last night.

This communique, which was preceded by speculation on a world-wide scale and any number of "leaks," did not say where in North Africa the meeting took place. However, it already was being called the Cairo conference. Censored overseas dispatches said that the principals visited the Sprinx and the Pyramids, near the Egyptian capital.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, having completed their conference with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, were reported to have moved on to Teheran, capital of Iran (Persia), for a meeting with Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin.

Master Plan May Emerge

Chiang apparently is not taking part in the conference with Stalin, since Russia is not at war with Japan. Out of the two conferences, however, is expected to emerge a master Allied plan for round-the-world blows against the two remaining Axis powers.

The Roosevelt-Churchill-Chiang "general statement" apropos Japan makes no attempt to drive a wedge between the Japanese people and the Japanese militarists. It is not a warning; neither is it an ultimatum.

The three great Allies simply and bluntly tell Japan that they are going to beat her into "unconditional surrender," and are going to "punish" her.

They are going to strip her of all the Pacific islands she has seized or occupied since the World War of 1914-18. They are going to force her to disgorge all the territory she has stolen from the Chinese—Manchuria, Formosa and the Pescadores. These "shall be restored to the Republic of China."

Korea to Be Free

Korea, formally annexed by Japan in 1910, is to become free and independent "in due course."

Not only that, but Japan will be "expelled from all other territories which she has taken by greed and violence." This would appear to cover not only Guam, Wake and other conquests of this war but territory that Japan won in the Russo-Japanese War early in this century. However, this was not

Boettiger Finds Chiang Quick On Comeback

Cairo, Dec. 1 (AP).—Maj. John Boettiger, son-in-law of President Roosevelt, found Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek pretty quick on the uptake at the big conference.

Boettiger has been engaged in Allied Military Government (AMG) work in Italy, and remarked to Chiang he would be interested in similar work in the Far East. Chiang replied quickly, through an interpreter:

"Sure, we'll take you into Tokyo with us."

Chiang Meets Noted Leaders First Time

By John W. White
Associated Press Staff Writer

Generalissimo-President Chiang Kai-shek's North 9frican conference with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill was his first face-to-face meeting with the leaders of great western nations.

He speaks no English. His best interpreter is his wife, who was at Cairo to fill her customary role as the generalissimo's "eyes and ears."

For a leader of a great nation these days, Chiang has traveled little outside his own country.

His first trip abroad was to Japan, where he attended the Tokyo Military Academy from 1917 to 1921. Then he joined the revolutionary movement of Dr. Sun Yat-sen and returned to China.

His next trip abroad was to Moscow in 1924 for several months of further military training.

He returned to China to lead a triumphant Chinese revolutionary army under the banner of Dr. Sun's Kuomintang Party, but in 1927 he broke with the party's left wing, dismissed his Russian advisers and formed a national government at Nanking backed by the mighty financial interests in Shanghai.

He was last abroad in February, 1942, when he flew to India to confer with Mohandas K. Gandhi, Pandit Jawaharal Nehru and British and American military leaders.

Early last month, in Chungking, Chiang conferred with Lord Louis Mountbatten, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell and Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell.

Western influence seriously entered Chiang's life in 1927 when he married American-educated Soong Mei-ling. She has been his constant companion, interpreter and closest adviser ever since. She was largely responsible for his becoming a Christian in 1930.

Few foreigners have had personal influence on Chiang. W. H. Donald, an Australian, was his adviser for several years before Pearl Harbor.

Dr. John Leighton Stuart, American president of Yenching University in Peiping, was his good friend and conferred often with him and the "Madamissimo." Stuart is still held prisoner by the Japanese in Peiping.

specifically mentioned, presumably because Russia was not represented at the conference and because she has a neutrality past with Japan.

At any rate, land-hungry Japan faces the prospect of being reduced from an empire of 3 million square miles and 500 million people to a country of 148,000 square miles and a Japanese population of 75 million.

'Covet No Gain'

The United States, Britain and China, the statement says, "covet no gain for themselves and have no though of territorial expansion." This raised the question of new American island bases in the Pacific after the war. The first Washington reaction to the statement was that it did not rule out such bases under some kind of international agreement.

The meeting in North Africa, biggest Allied war conference yet held, lasted five days, and (according to Cairo dispatches) was attended by more than 100 Americans, 201 Britishers, and 20 Chinees.

Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang ai-shek were the first to arrive at the closely guarded scene of the conference. They came in by plane from Chungking on the morning of November 21, after a four-day flight.

President Arrives Last

Prime Minister Churchill, who traveled by warship, arrived that evening, and President Roosevelt got in by plane the next morning, November 22.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill left North Africa November 27 and the Chiangs November 28. Newsmen, the Associated Press reported from Cairo, were not permitted to say where the conference was held, but could say that Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill and the Chiangs visited the Sphinx and the great Gizeh pyramids (which are close to Cairo).

The President and the Prime Minister were accompanied by their chiefs of staff, the same generals and admirals who have sat in on the great war conferences in Washington, Casablanca and Quebec.

Also present were the men who are directing the war against Japan in the Far East—not only the Chinese strategists but Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied commander in chief in Southeast Asia; Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of United States forces in China, Burma and India, and Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, chief of United States Air Forces in China.

While Gen. Douglas MacArthur was not present, the Southwest Pacific command was not ignored at the conference. His chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, attended.

The conference, although primarily devoted to the war against Japan, was not limited to that conflict. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander of the Mediterranean theater, was called in, and, according to Cairo, presided over the "biggest military meeting of the entire session."

This took place on November 26, and it was noted that the Chinese did not take part. A spokesman explained that the meeting dealt first with the Mediterranean campaign and second with grand European strategy.

It was reported in Cairo, the Associated Press said, that "the British and American general staffs engaged in long argument and discussion on details of a second front."

John F. Chester, Associated Press correspondent in Cairo, said that reporters were never allowed to see President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill or Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The only news they got, he said, come from nonjournalistic observers who reported only the physical facts, such as who conferred with whom, and who lunched or dined with whom.

In this connection, it was made known that Prime Minister Churchill was among the President's guests at a Thanksgiving Day meal which was served in typical American style with cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and all the trimmings.

The scene of the conference was surrounded by barbed wire and patrolled by thousands of soldiers. However, Cairo reported, a spokesman for President Roosevelt conceded that the conference was an "open secret."

Participants Named

The Associated Press dispatch from Cairo said the following took part in addition to those mentioned:

For the United States—Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to President Roosevelt; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the fleet and chief of naval operations; Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of Army Air Forces; Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of Army Service of Supply; John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War; Lewis W. Douglas, deputy shipping administrator; Harrp Hopkins, adviser to the President; W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador to Russia; John G. Winant, Ambassador to Britain; Laurence A. Steinhardt, Ambassador to Turkey, and former Ambassador to Russia; Maj. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, U. S. Army theater air officer in China, Burma and India.

For the British—Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary; Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, Ambassador to Russia; Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, Chief of the Naval Staff; Baron Leathers, Minister of War Transport; Field Marshal Sir John Dill, Member of the Combined Chiefs of Staff in Washington; Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff; Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal, Chief of Air Staff; Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, Air Chief in the Mediterranean; Brig. R. E. Laycock, Chief of the Commandos; Lieut. Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, Churchill's Chief of Staff; Gen. Sir Thomas Riddell-Webster, Quartermaster General; Maj. Gen. Adrian Carton de Wiart, Special Military Representative to China, and Sir Alexander Cardogan, Permanent Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs.

For the Chinese—Wang Chung-hui, former Foreign Minister; Admiral Shuen Chen-yang, director of military intelligence, and Generals Cheng Chen and Cho Chi-shou.

Reliable reports in Cairo said the American and British general staffs engaged in a long discussion on the details of a European invasion.

"Island Hopping" Discussed

A British source said the controversial subject of "island hopping" in the Pacific—already combed over in public by General MacArthur—was gone into thoroughly.

This source outlined these five issues as in the forefront of discussions on the British-American side.

1. Carrying the sea-air offensive to the gates of Japan. The determination to do this was reflected in the strength of the naval staffs present. The British admiralty alone was represented by 58 officials.

2. Avoidance of local operations. This was where "island hopping" was reported to have come in for extended talks.

3. Correlating future strategy on the basis of broader liaison between staffs.

4. Settling the enormous problems of transporting troops and supplies.

5. Developing the weight of the Pacific air assault.

The same source said the four main and urgent problems brought to the conference by the Chinese were:

1. Combined strategy for the Pacific, southeast Asia and China for the quick defeat of Japan by an all-out offensive.

2. Reopening the Burma Road by attack from India.

3. Badly needed supplies for the Chinese armies and people.

4. Postwar reconstruction in China and help from the British and United States Governments.

While the generals and admirals weighed their plans, the three chiefs of government were said to have talked in an atmosphere of warmest friendship, with Chiang's serene demenor, unbowed by his years of bitter warfare, contrasting with Churchill's buoyant enthusiasm and Roosevelt's engaging spirits.

The trio generally conferred alone in great secrecy at night after their advisers had held separate or joint meetings in the morning and afternoon.

The later sessions were held in a huge room furnished with a broad table and 28 chairs, with a huge global map on the wall in which the Pacific was the center.

into which Russian influence had been infiltrating.

Contributing causes were Russia's failure to remove her troops from Manchuria on specified dates following the Boxer Rebellion and Russia's seizure of Port Arthur on the Kwantung Peninsula as a terminus for the trans-Siberian Railway.

In this conflict Japan established herself as a naval power by annihilating the Russian fleet. In a treaty signed August 9, 1905, at Portsmouth, N. H., through the mediation of President Theodore Roosevelt, she was given recognition of her "paramount political, military and economic interests" in Korea.

Japan also regained the southern half of the island of Sakhalin, which Russia had annexed in 1875, as well as a lease on all of the Russian railway south of Changchun in Manchuria and the Kwantung Peninsula, including Port Arthur and Dairen.

In 1910 Japan formally annexed Korea into the empire.

These expansionist efforts were given new opportunity and impetus by the outbreak of the last war and in 1914 Japan lost no time in occupying all the island possessions of Germany in the Pacific, north of the Equator.

These included the Marshall, Caroline and Mariannas groups and the Versailles Treaty gave Japan a mandate over them. Altogether there were 623 islands, some mere specks, extending from the Equator north 1200 miles and dotting the ocean for 2500 miles east to west.

Eventually these islands, in which Japan constructed Truk and other powerful naval and air bases, became a springboard for the attack on Pearl Harbor.

In 1931 Japan took another step in its course of conquest by beginning her invasion of Manchuria. In two years this venture was complete and the Japanese created the puppet state of Manchukuo. Japan exerted continuing pressure on China, cutting off border provinces and forcing the naming of officials acceptable to the Japanese, until the present Japanese-Chinese war was begun July 7, 1937.

In the next three years Japan enveloped nearly all of the coastal region of China and took much of the worthwhile land of the interior, forcing the Chinese government to retire to Chungking.

In 1940 she gained a foothold in French Indo-China, left practically rudderless by the fall of France, and on July 25, 1941, the Vichy government announced Japan had been made the protector of the colony.

Having thus surrounded the entire southwest Pacific area, it was comparatively easy for the Japanese to engulf Malaya, Burma, the Netherlands East Indies, the large and small Melanesian Islands and the Philippines after Pearl Harbor.

Besides liberation of all the vast territory and peoples of China, the Philippines, Malaya, the Indies, etc., which Japan has overrun by war and is holding illegally, the extent of the amputation of the Japanese empire pledged at Cairo totals 604,456 square miles, with a population of 69,102,594 (based on figures available several years ago).

This may be broken down:

Korean League Hails Pledge Of Freedom

The Allied pledge to restore Korea's independence was hailed by the Sino-Korean Peoples League yesterday, a spokesman asserting it would touch off "plenty of fireworks" behind Japan's strategic areas.

"Twenty-six million Koreans will rejoice and be ever grateful to the three powers for this timely and effective Roosevelt - Churchill-Chiang statement," said Kilsoo K. Haan, Washington representative of the league.

Korean, 138 miles from Japan, was seized by the Japanese more than 30 years ago.

The three leaders in their historic African conference pledged "that in due course Korea shall become free and independent."

"As soon as Koreans in Korea, Japan, Manchuria and China learn of this solemn and sacred official promise, there will be plenty of fireworks behind Japan's strategic areas," Haan said in a statement.

"We are sincerely thankful for this opportunity to participate in this war against Japan. We do not desire freedom and independence on a silver platter—we are more than willing to give our live."

Affected Nations Hail Intention To Smash Japan

London, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Africa declaration of unshakeable determination to smash Japan and strip her of her stolen empire was warmly welcomed in the embassies and legations of London tonight and particularly by the Dutch and representatives of countries with inteersts in the Pacific.

Norwegians, Czechs, Poles and other noncolonial nations, however, unofficially confessed greater interest in any possible further meeting involving European questions.

Unofficial British comment reflected a certain disappointment that there was no announcement concerning a meeting of Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Joseph Stalin, which is widely rumored from foreign sources.

There also was some British disappointment evident that there was no specific mention of the status of Hongkong.

Chorus of Approval

Congressmen Hail 3-Power Cairo Pact

By the Associated Press

Members of Congress hailed the three-power Cairo agreement last night.

Senator Hill of Alabama said the Cairo declaration "means complete defeat of Japan in the war and the absolute determination that she shall not be in a position again to bring the scourge of war upon innocent people."

Although the announcement was applauded by Democrats and Republicans alike, there was disagreement as to how far President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain and President Chiang Kai-shek of China had gone in settling some of the vexing problems of the Orient.

Chairman Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee said he interpreted the tripartite statement as meaning that the British had agreed that Hongkong would be returned to China, that the Allies were renouncing claims to extra-territorial rights in China and that the East Indies would be freed of Dutch administration.

"We may have to take some of the mandated islands the Japanese have seized to use them for defensive bases and certainly China should have any it needs for self-protection," Reynolds declared.

On the other hand, Senator Austin (Republican) Vermont, said the absence of any reference in the statement to the Philippines, Hongkong, other islands or portions of the Chinese mainland occupied by other countries before the Japanese conquest "implies resoration to those countries of their respective jurisdictions when the Japanese are driven out."

Senator Taft (Republican) Ohio, said the declaration "ought to have tremendous effect on the morale of the Chinese people."

Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota: "I am pleased beyond words that there is no coveting of the territory that will be taken from Japan."

Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia: "This . . . gives us every encouragement that we will all be fighting together to crush Japan."

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida: "It will encourage oppressed peoples."

Representative Bloom (Democrat) of New York: "Now we can see our path to victory straight ahead."

Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas: "A nation like Japan, with its inordinate ambition for world domination and empire, should be pushed back and kept there."

House Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts: "With unity of action ensuing, which the conference assures, far reaching offensive warfare against Japan will follow. The determined tone of the communique is impressive."

British Scoop On Conference Angers Davis

By the Associated Press

Indignant at Reuters' disclosure yesterday of the United Nations conference in North Africa, Director Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information, said last night he would "do everything feasible" to prevent future British "scoops" on joint Allied developments.

Davis said the British news agency's story from Lisbon Tuesday, which gave the first definite word of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting with Chiang Kai-shek and the impending meeting with Stalin, was objectionable for two reasons:

1. American newspapers had the full story, including the agreements reached, but were bound by secrecy not to print it until 7:30 p. m., EWT, last night.

2. The premature release gave the Axis propaganda mill a 30-hour interval, unchallenged by Allied broadcasts, to put its own twist on the conference and discount its importance.

Davis said that DNB, German news agency, was on the air a half hour after Reuters' story was distributed. In another half hour the Germans were broadcasting a fully developed propaganda line: the Allies were being taken into camp by the Bolsheviks, Berlin would meet any decisions of the Allied leaders with calm and with "grim resolve." The Japanese, quoted the Reuters story, telling the world that their foreign office did not regard the parley as of much importance.

Allied broadcasters could not reply because they were under instructions not to acknowledge the meeting or the whereabouts of the world figures involved.

Chiang Declines Seat of Honor

Cairo, Dec. 1 (AP).—A "family group" picture—of three leaders of the United Nations family—taken during the North Africa conference produced the usual friendly family group argument about who will sit where.

"Right here, right here between the Prime Minister and myself," said President Roosevelt to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek as the three assembled on the terrace of Roosevelt's villa. "You are the guest of honor. After all, it is your conference."

But the little generalissimo, smartly turned out in khaki uniform and white gloves, smilingly declined and sat on the President's left. Churchill then moved to the President's right

Allied Ships Shell Gasmata, Madang

Pacific Forces Forge Deep Into Jap Territory

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Thursday), Dec. 2 (AP).—Carrying the naval war to Japan's front door, American light naval craft shelled Gasmata, New Britain, and Madang, New Guinea, during the night and dawn hours of November 29 and 30 in the first sea bombardment of these enemy strongholds.

The naval vessels—probably destroyers—sought to blast Japanese shore installations at Gasmata and aerial spotters, a headquarters spokesman said, termed the marksmanship "effective."

The attack on Madang, northeast New Guinea, was a foray deep into Japanese territory and a small, unidentified enemy vessel was sunk.

Action Accelerated

These naval strokes not only accelerated the action against the enemy in the New Guinea-New Britain area, which has been pounded heavily by Allied aircraft of late, but also gave some indication of the policies of Vice Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, former naval chief in the Aleutians, who recently was made chief of naval forces in the Southwest Pacific.

Aerial blows were struck at the Japanese air base at Cape Gloucester on the extreme western point of New Britain. Liberator heavy bombers and Mitchell mediums, with an escort of Lightning fighters, dropped 28 tons of explosives in this second attack within 24 hours. Enemy bombers were destroyed on the runways and supply dumps were set afire. Barges were destroyed and gun positions silenced in the extension of the Cape Gloucester assault from Borgen Bay to Reibeck Bay on the north coast of the island.

Alexishafen Battered

Liberators hit Alexishafen, 10 miles north of Madang, with 70 tons of bombs the night of November 29-30, and visited destruction on Kalasa in the Sio area to the south.

In Admiral William F. Halsey's Solomons area, where the Americans hold a beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville, two formations of Dauntless divebombers and 40 Avenger torpedo bombers, escorted by Aircobras, bombed and strafed enemy strong points nearby with 46 tons of explosives.

The Japanese shelled the beachhead east of Torokina but Admiral Halsey's headquarters said the artillery caused neither casualties nor damage.

Roosevelt Travel Sets New Record

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt has just added another big chunk of mileage to his already astronomical travel record.

He already had covered 37,480 miles this year, and is well on the way to exceeding his previous year's record of 47,914 in 1936.

Since he entered the White House his mileage is now figured on the basis of how far it exceeds the mean distance of 238,957 miles between the Earth and Moon.

To date he has traversed 289,817 miles, divided by years as follows:

1934	24,838
1935	19,071
1936	47,914
1937	19,964
1938	29,159
1939	30,496
1940	32,194
1941	20,723
1942	20,306

'Secret' Cairo Parley Known To All World

By E. C. Daniel

London, Dec. 1 (AP).—Although the journey of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill was one of the worst-kept Allied war secrets, American and British newspaper readers and radio listeners had to take most of their advance news of the conference from enemy and foreign reports.

Allied censorship prevented publication of official news of the North African conference until 7:30 p. m., E.W.T., Wednesday, but permitted use of certain unofficial details and rumors to such an extent that the public, both Allied and Axis, had been well prepared for much of the news by the time it was formally released.

The Churchill-Roosevelt trip to North Africa first became known to the Associated Press London bureau, which had been anticipating a tri-power conference, on November 15, seven days before the conference began.

That same night the Vichy radio forecast a Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting, and the outpouring of Axis reports, many of them amazingly close to the truth, commenced.

Although London newsmen quickly garnered the essential facts, British censorship imposed a strict ban on stories from London stating that the conference was imminent. American newspapermen were permitted to cable to the United States only reports from abroad.

Censorship operated on the theory that there was no point in suppressing news which had already spread all over enemy and neutral countries but that any dispatches from London would tend to confirm enemy guesses.

Finally the news was released. Dispatches reached London and New York yesterday by cable from Cairo for publication tonight.

But Reuters obtained a dispatch from Lisbon reporting definitely the previously unconfirmed fact that Chiang Kai-shek was a third party at the conference. The full story was in print abroad, although censorship prohibited its publication in Britain.

To criticism from Elmer Davis, head of the U. S. Office of War Information, Reuters replied that the dispatch was a legitimate scoop obtained by its Lisbon correspondent and not barred from distribution outside of Britain by British censorship.

Gripsholm's 1500 Repatriates Home After 16,000-Mile Voyage

By James D. White

(Who was repatriated August 26, 1942, on the Gripsholm)

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP).—Nearly 1500 joyous American repatriates from the Far East reached America today and pleaded that other Americans in the Japanese-occupied Orient be brought home before—in the words of one of them—they "become a lost tribe."

They cheered and sang "God Bless America" as the exchange liner Gripsholm sailed through the harbor mist past the Statue of Liberty to her dock, completing the repatriates' 16,000-mile journey.

From Portuguese India, where the exchange for Japanese nationals took place, the Gripsholm brought 1223 United States nationals, 217 Canadians and some Latin Americans.

The Canadians were taken immediately to Canada on special trains, but the first passengers to leave the ship were State Department personnel, who had been caught in Manila at the outbreak of the war.

Mrs. Jessie Mann, consular service employe who was trapped there en route to Shanghai, made the plea to "get the Americans and other internees in Manila home, or they will be a lost tribe."

She explained that there still were 3800 Americans and other internees at Santo Tomas, interment camp in Manila, and that they were finding food and clothing major problems.

The disembarking of nonofficial repatriates proceeded slowly through "the mill," as the first of them described the interrogation by Government agencies cooperating in a closely organized panel of questioners.

Naval officers who boarded the Gripsholm stated the repatriates looked surprisingly well and adequately clothed.

Naval officers said that there were probbaly 15 stretcher cases aboard.

Arrivals included R. R. Manders of 3848 Harrison st. nw., Washington, who came from Shanghai. He is connected with the Inter-Chemical Co.

British Advance Beyond Sangro

ery's attack was given in the announcement that nine waves of Allied bombers and 50 formations of fighters and fighter-bombers swept over the 15-mile-long battlefield during the day. Five Focke-Wulf fighters were sent crashing to earth.

Tough going still faces Montgomery's forces. The coastal area north and west from Sangro Ridge is scarred with numerous water courses and is defended by concrete fortifications. The Germans have converted many buildings into heavily-gunned forts and the terrain is so rugged that the job of smashing deeper into the enemy's defenses rests almost entirely with the infantry.

Tanks, in fact, have played a comparatively insignificant part in last weeks' bloody fighting north of the Sangro. Infantry and planes have carried the brunt. Prisoners streaming into Allied pens continue to be in a highly nervous state from the bombing they have endured during unbroken days and nights.

42 Planes Lost in Nazi Battles

bombers got two German fighters, while other Typhoons, covering Mosquitos attacking shipping in the Brest area, destroyed a Junkers-88 and a Junkers-52.

Canadian Spitfires escorted the Marauders which had among their targets the Cambrai airfield in France. The Canadians got two Fockewulf-190's.

The Americans, in smashing once more at the Nazis' western industrial basin, carried the weight of the British-based aerial attack on Germany, following up their bombing of Bremen Monday, and the arms center of Solingen Tuesday.

London Has Alert

London had an air-raid alarm tonight but no bombs were dropped in the area of the British capital. The roar of planes was heard and antiaircraft fire was heavy.

To the south American Liberators of the Northwest African Air Force contributed further to the aerial punches with this war's first blow Tuesday against the Italian Adriatic port of Fiume, which the Germans use as a supply base for their armies in Italy and the Balkans.

Liberator crews returning from the American heavy bomber raid on Germany reported seeing new Messerschmitt-410 fighter-bombers among numerous enemy planes. They also identified about 50 Me-109's, Me-210's, Focke-Wulf-190's and Junkers 88's.

Close formations of twin-engined German fighters fired rockets from the rear, while single-engined enemy aircraft carried out a frontal attack, diving out of the sun.

"Rocket shells were bursting all around us," said Maj. John A. Brooks 3d of Greenville, Ohio, pilot leading this group, "but if we didn't hit the target today, we never will."

Month-end figures of Allied and Axis air losses in the European theater gave impressive testimony of the pace at which the attack on Germany is being prosecuted even during poor winter flying. The American Eighth Air Force lost 140 planes of all types during November while destroying 247 German craft. The RAF lost 224 ships during the month. German losses in all theaters were placed at 521.

Gunning for Berlin

There is no doubt the British are gunning for Berlin with a vengeance. Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, disclosed in Commons that 13,000 long tons of bombs were dropped on Germany in November, as compared with 120 tons dropped by the Nazis on Britain in the same period.

"If I were allowed to choose only one target in Germany, it would be Berlin," he declared in answer to a questioner of the RAF's bombing policy.

Since January 1, Sir Archibald said, the British have lost a total of 2083 bombers in operations from Britain, the Americans 829. Average American losses in November were eight bombers to the heavy raid, a great reduction from the previous month.

Berliners Reported Cold to Raid Retaliation Talk

Stockholm, Dec. 1 (INS).—Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels' frenzied efforts during the last two days to bolster sagging morale of Berlin's bomb-panicked residents by promising retaliation against the Allies was revealed today to be meeting only lukewarm success.

Despite the din of ears equipped with loudspeakers broadcasting recorded speeches that chant of revenge throughout the bomb-ravaged capital, most residents merely shrug, according to travelers just arrived in Sweden by plane from Germany.

The consensus, they said, is:

"We've heard those records for one year, but there has been no change."

And though the Nazi government is seeking desperately to improve the spirits of the Reich's citizens with its "canned" promises of retaliation for the giant Allied raids, most Berliners were described as having no illusions.

They expect new bombings. The destruction in Berlin, said one traveler, is "incredible."

"Where the Wohnungknacker (blockbuster) hits," he said, "there is only gravel and more gravel. You can see no parts of furniture; no metal parts of typewriters or radio equipment. You find only burned paper and visiting cards from the doors of flats, and the street littered by the lodgers' bills and letters which somehow escaped being burned."

Confession Claimed in One Ohio Farm Slaying

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 1 (AP).—James W. Collett, a prosperous 60-year-old Clinton County farm leader, confessed tonight, Prosecutor John T. Hill of Fayette County announced, that he killed Elmer McCoy, his wealthy brother-in-law, in a dispute over money.

The purported confession left unsolved, for the moment, the slaying of McCoy's wife Forrest, 64, and their daughter Mildred, 22, who were shot to death at the same time—on Thanksgiving Eve—near Washington Court House, Ohio.

The prosecutor said Collett related that after he shot McCoy, a 59-year-old hog breeder, he suffered a brief lapse of memory "and the next thing I knew I was on my way home."

Hill quoted Collett, whose wife is the only sister of McCoy, as saying he went to the McCoy farm home, Oak View, to discuss rent of $5,000 due Mrs. Collett on a farm, and met the hog breeder; that they quarreled and McCoy struck at him with a club; then:

"I grabbed up a gun from a nail tie (barn timber) and shot him in the back.

A tenant farmer last Thursday found McCoy's body in the barn, Mrs. McCoy's on a screened back porch, and Mildred's sprawled by the automobile in which she had just returned from Pitsburg High School, where she was a teacher. Each had been shot in the head with a pistol. Mrs. McCoy had five other bullet wounds in her body.

Mrs. Collett last Monday was appointed to help administer her brother's estate. They have one son, 29-year-old Thomas Collett.

Germans Stiffen, Slow Red Drive

sides' ability to get a steady flow of reinforcements and materials.

There was no news of the Kiev bulge where Tuesday the Russians admitted a retreat from the railway junction of Korosten, 11 days after they fell back from Zhitomir in the area where the Germans were achieving their greatest success in counterattack.

Nor did the communique mention the race for Zhlobin, key junction on the escape route for the retreating German garrisons of Gomel. The Russians were last reported closing a pincer whose ends were 17 miles apart at Zhlobin.

Moscow dispatches, however, gave some explanation of the lack of Soviet progress. They said the Germans were moving into the attack in a concerted effort at regaining lost lines of communications.

Their major effort appeared aimed at obtaining again the Leningrad-Odessa north-south railway which they lost when the Russians surged out from Kiev and straddled the line from Zhitomir north to Yelsk.

Some of the greatest battles of the war now are raging, particularly in the Korosten-Zhitomir sector, wrote Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press reporter in Moscow, who has just returned from this area.

Nazis Pushed Back, Tito Says

London, Dec. 1 (AP).—A war bulletin from Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) said today that his Yugoslav Partisans had driven the Germans back in fighting in the mountains of central Bosnia and that elsewhere in the Balkans guerillas were inflicting heavy punishment on the troops of Marshal Rommel.

The communique, however acknowledged the Germans had occupied the Island of Uljan, a few miles off the northern Dalmatian coast. Liberators from the Northwest African Air Force yesterday blasted Fiume, Italy's third largest port, and the German's principal supply center for the Balkan war theater. Railway lines radiate from Fiume into northern Italy, where large guerilla forces also are battling the Germans and across Yugoslavia into the Balkans.

Tito—whose forces now include, according to reports here, the Italian Venezia division and the remnants of two other Italian divisions—reported the recapture of Vares, an industrial center 25 miles north of Sarajevo after bitter fighting. It was the second time within three months that the Partisans had wrested the city from the Nazis.

The Partisan communique also told of guerilla advances in Macedonia, and of heavy fighting along Yugoslavia's northern Adriatic coast.

King Peter of Yugoslavia in a broadcast from Cairo commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the union of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes promised a democratic future for Yugoslavia and amnesty for a group of Yugoslav officers who had refused to serve under General Illitch, Yugoslav commander in chief.

Whisky Hijackers Caught Redhanded

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Five men attempting to steal a $100,000 shipment of select whisky were seized by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents on the lower west side today.

E. E. Conroy, special agent in charge of the FBI in New York, said the men were arrested shortly after they had bound and gagged drivers of two trucks on which the liquor was loaded, and were preparing to leave with the loot.

700 District 'Kid Gang' Members Achieve Self-Reformation

and other gangs comprising hundreds of kids from the slum area came around to listen. They decided to try the new idea.

The Junior Police Corps, under Patrolman Cowan's guidance but run completely on its own, now has close to 700 members from the thirteenth Precinct area, plus more than a hundred girl "auxiliary" members.

Truancy at Banneker Junior High School has dropped "considerably," according to Mrs. O. M. Walker, principal of the school. The idea of allowing the boys to tackle and work out their problems already is proving its worth among many of her pupils who, backward in their studies, previously tried to gain favor with the "mob" by bullying younger children, she said.

Walker L. Savoy, principal of the Garnett-Patterson School, attended by many of the Corps members, yesterday declared that there has been much less fighting among the pupils in recent months. "They seem to have more of a sense of responsibility about themselves and their schoolmates," he added.

Local businessmen, formerly among the chief victims of the present corps boys, add their praise to the school authorities.

The experiment will be reported in full to Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, Captain Weber said yesterday.

He discussed the plan with Patrolman Cowan, Weber said, guiding him in putting it into effect, so as to encourage the children to correct their own behavior without allowing them to feel that they might "force" others to follow their example.

of school sites and new elevators in the District Building.

At the same time the budget calls for a decrease of $2,700,000 in the payment of current debt obligations and the setting up of a public works investment fund of $3,400,000 which will be held at interest for postwar Capital improvements.

General Fund Figures

The general fund in the 1945 estimate amounts to $59,057,154; the highway fund, $4,644,693; and the water fund, $2,664,584.

As regards the highway fund, Fowler pointed out that although the recommended increase for the fiscal year 1945 over 1944 is $1,277,377, the actual increase can be reduced by $1,059,000, which was the amount of 1943 funds made available in 1944.

Overtime in the highway fund amounts to $65,000, while increases to per diem and unclassified employes total $52,000.

About half of the increase in the water fund is for payment of overtime, amounting to $190,000. Other increases include $53,000 for per diem employes; $125,000 for replacing and cleaning mains; $315,000 capital outlay, and a decrease of $300,000 in investments. The increase totals $423,173.

Objections Seen Met

The plan as submitted to the Budget Bureau yesterday was presented by the Commissioners in the belief that it meets all of the objections of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren to consolidating the District budget.

Late in October Warren directed a letter to the Bureau of the Budget complaining that under District budget plans then under consideration, control exercised by Congress would, to some extent, be lost," since "functions of several of the offices, created as separate and distinct organizations for the purpose of independently safeguarding the interests of the public and the District, would be placed under the direction of one official (presumably an executive officer) who, in turn, would be accountable to the Commissioners."

Warren said such a setup might cause officials in charge of the respective offices concerned to be hampered in the free exercise of their functions at the discretion of the official who exercises control over the funds appropriation."

He further indicated accounting and auditing problems would be multiplied and complicated.

In the plan as finally submitted, Fowler pointed out the number of appropriation items would be reduced from 215 to 95 and the general provisions from 41 to 22.

Simplification Move

"Each office, agency, or institution, and each function and service will continue to be justified in detail as heretofore," he pointed out, and added that this revision will promote more orderly budgeting, eliminate at least one-third of the present bookkeeping operations, and facilitate a comprehensive grasp of the entire District Budget, which is not now possible on account of the extraordinarily large number of items arranged without any order whatsoever."

In addition to cutting out the blind sopts, previously carried in other appropriation bills, it will separate operating expenses from capital outlay to facilitate the prompt determination of the total sums allotted to each, Fowler said.

Kentucky Victory Spurs GOP Hopes

would like confirmation.

Consensus Republican view was that the President would not run unless he was reasonably certain of victory, and that his own chances certainly have been impaired by recent Republican voting trends. Republicans mostly took the view that the pressure on the President, both from politicians and jobholders in his own party, will be tremendous, but that Mr. Roosevelt will not want to crown an unprecedented 12-year record with defeat.

Look Beyond Kentucky

Republicans, meanwhile, looked beyond Kentucky to count two other vacant House Democratic seats as theirs for the taking. These include Pennsylvania's Second District seat, formerly held by Representative James P. McGranery, resigned. This seat will go on the auction bloc in a special election next month.

Also claimed for a switch-over was the Oklahoma Second District seat formerly held by Representative Jack Nichols, resigned. But in Oklahoma, Republicans may have trouble putting their hopes to a test. Though the seat has been vacant since June, the Democratic Governor has made no move for a special election.

Tuesday's election of Republican Chester O. Carrier to the Kentucky seat sought by Fourth District Democratic Boss J. Dan Talbott, will bring House Republican strength to 208, against 219 Democratic seats, four held by other parties, and four vacancies.

Democratic strength will return to 220 when Alabama fills the vacant seat of the late Representative Henry B. Steagall. If Republicans win all the other vacancies, as they claim they will, the Democratic feather margin will be dangerously cropped.

Odds Still Seen 55-45

In the face of Kentucky returns and GOP jubilation, Representative Patrick H. Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, chairman of the Congressional Democratic Campaign Committee, said he still believed the odds are "55 to 45" that Democrats will retain control of the next House.

"I attribute the loss of the Fourth District Kentucky seat to a number of other factors outside of political reasons, as well as factional antagonisms that had arisen in the district," said Drewry.

But House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts said the huge Fourth District majority, on top of the November 2 election trend, confirmed his belief "that the people for a certainty will give Republicans a strong majority in the next House."

Martin pointed out that the 1942 Republican Fourth District candidate polled only 44 per cent of the total district vote, compared with 63 per cent registered by Carrier—a 19 per cent Republican gain in the district. He said the fact that 5000 more votes were cast than in 1942 was evidence that "the people are interested."

In our judgment, a chalk-stripe suit is indispensible for Autumn, Winter and Spring wear. We have procured a superb worsted with faint chalk stripes exactly three-quarters of an inch apart. Very rich shades of navy blue, oxford grey and warm brown. We have had this fine fabric tailored in our very popular "Guardsman" model. It will be worth your while to try this suit on. If you are short the stripes will make you look taller. If you're stout, they will make you seem slimmer. And if you are thin, the broader-shouldered lines of our "Guardsman" will be very becoming. OPA Advisory Unit Named

By Walter Wood

Price Administrator Chester Bowles, in line with his policy of making rationing easier for people, yesterday appointed a consumer advisory committee, including seven Washingtonians, to study the effects of OPA regulations on the consumer with a view to improving operations.

The committee, at its organization meeting here, elected officers and listened to Bowles.

Kazel Kyrk, professor of economics, University of Chicago, was named chairman, and Helen Hall, head of the Henry Street Settlement, New York City, vice chairman.

Caroline Ware, national social studies chairman of the American Association of University Women, and professor at Howard and American Universities, was elected secretary.

Duties of Committee

Committee members will (1) tell OPA how its various programs are working for the consumer and what can be done to improve them and (2) sit with OPA officials on planning of new programs.

"For the past few months," said Bowles, "we (the OPA) have been working to make rationing and price control a little easier for American families and businessmen to live with. I think a fair amount of progress has been made, but there is a great deal more to be done. I know that an advisory committee of people who know the day-by-day problems the average family faces can be a great help."

Washington Members

In addition to Miss Ware, six other Washingtonians on the committee are:

Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, executive secretary for CIO auxiliaries; the Rev. John M. Hayes, social action department, National Catholic Welfare Conference; Mrs. Harriet Howe, editor Consumer Education Service, published by the American Home Economics Association; Mrs. Ruth Lamb Atkinson, legislative representative, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Esther Cole Franklin, associate in social studies, American Association of University Women; Mrs. DeForest Van Slyck, American Association of Social Workers.

Washington members, it was said, will act as a liaison committee between the whole group and the OPA.

Allies in Air

Chinese Rout Jap Invaders In Changteh

Chungking, Dec. 1 (AP).—Chinese troops under Allied plane cover drove the Japanese out of Changteh today, a communique announced.

The Japanese forced their way into the city, gateway to China's "rice bowl," Monday, and bloody fighting ensued, with Gen. Yu Cheng-wan, commander of the Chinese 57th division, directing the struggle in the streets. Aided by "brilliant air cover" from American and Chinese planes, he drove the invaders out this morning.

Fighting continued outside the city, with the Japanese squeezed between the Changteh garrison and Chinese reinforcements.

The Chinese also claimed recapture of Tehshan, between Changteh and Changsha.

Rangoon Blasted

New Delhi, Dec. 1 (AP).—The United States Tenth Army Air Force struck its mightiest blows in the China-Burma-India theater when two heavy bomber formations, of more than 50 Liberators each, pounded Rangoon during the weekend, dropping 250 tons of bombs.

Medium American bombers followed, blasting special targets.

The Japanese lost 14 aircraft.

Point Values of All Beef Cuts Reduced by New OPA Order to an average value of six and a third points in early November.

Steaks came down three points a pound, except for chuck steak, which was reduced two points. Beef roasts weer reduced three points except for chuck and English cut, which came down two points. Stews and other cuts of beef dropped two points, with the exception of flank which was reduced one point and boneless brisket which was reduced by three points.

Hamburger came down from seven to six points a pound. Round steak of veal dropped two points and leg of lamb one point. All sausages were reduced, most of them by one point, and lard also came down one point.

Vegetables which can now be bought in greater abundance include frozen beets, carrots, pumpkin and squash—which were reduced from 12 to 2 points per pound—frozen leafy greens, except spinach, which came down four points, frozen asparagus, broccoli, snap beans, cauliflower and mixed vegetables—all down eight points per pound—and frozen elderberries, plums, prunes, rhubarb or mixed fruits—all down six points. Frozen baked and boiled beans also came down four points on the pound.

Canned spinach was reduced seven points for a number 2½ can, enjoying the greatest reduction on the canned-foods list. Down three points on the average-sized can will be green and wax beans and carrots. Soybeans were reduced two points on the can and other canned and bottled dried beans were cut four points per pound. Vegetable juices were cut from two to one point for a number two can.

Tomato sauce and soup went up one point and tomato sauce packed with cheese went up three points. The latter advance was made, OPA said, to slow down the consumption of cheese "which has been moving too rapidly in relation to the available supply."

Canned sauer kraut was listed at a point-free value, but OPA pointed out the entire pack has been taken for military use. However, unrationed bulk kraut and kraut packed in jars with a screw top will be available to civilians.

Grapefruit juice was made point-less principally because 2,400,000 cans recently were released to civilians from Government-held stocks. Other citrus juices, of which there is only a limited civilian supply, were made point-free, OPA said, to prevent the "backing up" of that commodity when grapefruit juice was removed from rationing.

Surrender No Points For Citrus Marmalades

Citrus marmalades which may be bought point-free, the Office of Price Administration explained yesterday, include all varieties made entirely from citrus fruits.

OPA said it had received reports that points were being collected for spreads labeled "orange marmalade," the mistake being due to the impression labels on point-free sweets had to contain the word "citrus."

Probers Wait Legal Action On De Lorenzo

By Mary Spargo

The Department of Justice is scheduled to face a blast from some members of the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee which has investigated the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., if it delays long in laying before a grand jury evidence of the falsification of Federal records which Thomas V. De Lorenzo, president of Local 365 UAW-CIO, admitted during hearings.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia of the full committee called on the Justice Department to investigate the whole Brewster situation on October 20 and arranged for a department representative to sit in at the hearings of his committee.

He said last night he had "no information" on whether or when the Justice Department might move.

Action Forecast November 7

On November 7, Tom Clark, Assistant Attorney General, told The Post that he would lay the whole Brewster affair before a grand jury inside two weeks. It is understood, however, that the Justice Department has delayed its move pending completion of the subcommittee's hearings.

Ill at his home yesterday, Clark could not be reached to say when the grand jury might be called, or whether it would be summoned in New York or Philadelphia.

The hearings were completed Tuesday with the testimony of Henry J. Kaiser, new Brewster president, and the subcommittee report is expected to be given to the full committee a week from this Friday.

Because of an agreement among members of the subcommittee headed by Representative Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia not to discuss conclusions in the Brewster case before next Wednesday, when each committee member will hand in a review of the situation for the report, members would not be quoted yesterday concerning the part they had expected the Justice Department to play.

It was made clear, however, that members were insistent that the Justice Department should lay information before a grand jury concerning the testimony that De Lorenzo had made false statements on his Selective Service registration, and on an application for a Civil Service job with the War Labor Board.

Committee members were so incensed at the record of De Lorenzo, whom they have repeatedly termed "an admitted liar," on the basis of his own testimony, that up until final testimony was in yesterday a report asking cancellation of the Brewster contract for Corsair fighters for the Navy appeared likely.

More fuel was added to the indignation of the committee when De Lorenzo's union and International UAW officials defended him and when violent attacks on the committee were printed in the local union's official organ, Aero News.

Although it now appears unlikely that cancellation will be recommended, sentiment is growing to adopt a motion made by Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota to have the whole Brewster matter kept open for a few months, without additional hearings, and with an interim report, to see whether increased production will continue.

D. C. Nurse Arrested On Abortion Charge

Mrs. Mary Rogers Perkins, 47, a registered nurse, of 510 F st. ne., was arrested yesterday by police and charged with abortion shortly after she admitted she had received $75 for performing an illegal operation on a 30-year-old white woman September 26. Arraigned before the United States Commissioner, she was released on $1500 bond. The hearing was continued until December 6, permitting her to seek counsel.

Senator Brewster Questions American Policy in Supplying Oil for Combatants

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—Senator Ralph O. Brewster (Republican) of Maine declared today that the United States was furnishing approximately 80 per cent of the per cent of the petroleum consummed by the United Nations, while Great Britain furnished about 8 per cent.

"The most optimistic figures do not indicate that the United States has more than twice the reserves of Great Britain and these figures are open to serious question because of their somewhat speculative nature," Brewster added in an address prepared for delivery at the dedication of a Standard Oil Co. aviation gasoline refinery.

Brewster, one of the five members of Congress who made an aerial tour of battle zones, commented that "there has been in the inquiries of the Senators no disposition to upset any current apple carts or any failure to recognize the necessity of concentrating every resource without regard to country on the immediate objective of the winning of the war.

Limit Obvious

"With less than half of the petroleum reserves of the world, America obviously cannot go on indefinitely supplying 80 per cent of the consumption."

The Maine Republican reported that "our first real shock came at Abadan on the Persian Gulf, where we found one of the greatest refineries in the world under British control operating far below its capacity with a potential increase of 40 per cent in its output. This occasioned our first inquiry as to the sources of our petroleum supply and has led to a study of the entire situation from the standpoint of United States policy regarding petroleum."

He added that "what we found gave us considerable occasion for concern."

Questions Future Policy

He said the problem of utilizing more British oil in the Mediterranean area "focuses the issue as to what American policy on petroleum shall be in the present and in the postwar world. . .

"Great Britain has found it practical to have government ownership of shares in private companies and carry on in a partnership that is a tribute to the capacity of British capital and British cabinets to get along together. . . .

"Before embarking upon Government exploration and exploitation of foreign oil reserves with all its fearsome implications in foreign policy, it would seem far better to support American companies abroad in their endeavors to develop world resources and world markets."

Lieut. Col. Cook Of Washington Awarded Medal

Lieut. Col. Bailey C. Cook, 1733 20th st. nw., has been awarded the Silver Star for "gallantry in action," the War Department announced Tuesday.

On May 28 Colonel Cook led two formations of B-25s on a mission to bomb an airdrome, the citation said. Despite the loss of his fighter escort, he continued on the course and in disregard of 50 enemy fighter planes, completed the mission. Eleven enemy planes were destroyed.

Colonel Cook, 29, was graduated from Kelly Field in 1939, the fourth generation of an Army family and the son of the late Lieut. Col. Seth W. Cook of the Air Corps. Earlier in the year he was cited for heading a mission which obliterated an enemy warship near northern Tunisia.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Downes Cook, and mother, Mrs. Seth Cook, live at the 20th st. address.

Crippled Children Merger Advocated

Cooperative effort of private and public agencies to solve educational and medical problems of crippled District children, was urged by Col. E. W. Palmer of the National Society for Crippled Children, yesterday. Merger of the functions of public and private groups in the field of the handicapped would have measureable effect in remedying defects in the present system of care, he said.

Announcement was made of the election of the following officers: M. J. Uline, president; A. W. Howard, first vice president; Mrs. William E. Borah, second vice president; James C. Dulin jr., treasurer; Mrs. Beulah J. Drake, recording secretary; William Sardo jr., corresponding secretary, and Mrs. C. D. Lowe, assistant to Sardo.

Listed Local Stocks Show Sharp Gains

By S. Oliver Goodman

Substantial advances have been recorded this year in the active stocks listed on the Washington Stock Exchange, a survey indicated yesterday.

Leaders of the rise have been bank securities and department store issues. Riggs National Bank common stock at its current price of 301½ shows a gain of 53¼ points, while Washington Loan & Trust at 230 is up 30 points since last December 31. American Security & Trust has soared 49 points to 230.

In the department store group Garfinckel common stock has nearly doubled in price, last sale being at 15½ against 8 on December 31. Woodward & Lothrop common stock is up 7½ at 41.

Notable climbers in the utility group are Capital Transit common at 29, up 3; Washington Gas Light common at 21, up 5½.

In the miscellaneous class gains of 5 to 14 points have been registered by Lanston Monotype, Mergenthaler Linotype and Peoples Drug stocks.

Outstanding performer in the less spectacular bond group was Georgetown Gas Light first 5s of 1961 which spurted 7¾ points to 124¼. Potomac Electric Power first 3½s of 1966 are up about two points.

Indicating the investment nature of the local stock exchange is the fact that every stock traded so far this year is on a dividend basis. Few stock exchanges in the country have as many regular dividend paying securities listed as the Washington Stock Exchange.

More, Better Sex Education Urged for Delinquent Youths

By the Associated Press

Improved and increased sex education among young people is the best way to combat mounting juvenile delinquency, several child guidance experts told a Senate subcommittee yesterday.

"Our culture has been squeamish and evasive with respect to the most fundamental of all human responsibilities—the begetting and rearing of children," Dr. Arnold Gesell, Yale University's child development clinic director, declared.

Other witnesses ranging from Dame May Whitty, 78-year-old English film star, to G. Howland Shaw, State Department official who makes juvenile study his avocation, joined Gessel in stressing that the problem was a long-range one.

Dame May, enlivened the testimony with quips and vigorous praise for the movie industry as a factor of "considerable assistance in solving the problem," through production of fine pictures.

She made her comment after Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau, had declared America's theaters were "becoming virtual day-care centers" for adolescent children left unsupervised by their parents.

Miss Lenroot also emphasized that planners must start concerning themselves now with postwar delinquency, which she said "will become a much greater problem than the present one."

Charles L. Chute, New York City, National Probation Association executive secretary, criticized Tuesday's witnesses for placing "all the blame on parents." He declared "every case is different and the judge is the one who should say who's wrong."

Shaw joined in this view, declaring "communities should share the fault," and adding he has "some doubts as to whether the religious leaders are getting their program across effectively."

Chairman Pepper (Democrat) of Florida commented that on the basis of testimony thus far it appeared the best role of the Federal Government in helping to solve the problem was to "help outline broad policies and perhaps set up some body to coordinate various studies, standards and procedures in the general educational program."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt took up the delinquency problem at her press conference, taking to task communities and Government alike for failing to meet their responsibilities. She said proposals to convert Army training camps into Federal camps for teen-age offenders smack of the reformatory.

"If you can keep children out of the reformatory you'd better do it," she said.

The First Lady asserted that children can be taught very young to be conscious of their responsibilities in the family and in the sponsibilities in their respective home..

For example, she said, her grandchildren are conscious of their rehomes, partly because their fathers who are away fighting on various fronts have impressed upon the children that they are "the man of the house."

Plan to Hike Show Tax Assailed

By the Associated Press

Walter Hampden, veteran Shakespearean actor, and Eddie Dowling, musical comedy star, headlined a big cast of theatrical figures who protested to the Senate Finance Committee yesterday against a proposal to double the amusements admissions tax.

Hampden told the committee that the rate in the pending tax bill, boosting the tax from 1 to 2 cents on each 10 cents or fraction thereof in ticket prices, would send the average citizen scurrying past the box office.

Dowling said the effects of the 20 per cent tax on the show business were unpredictable.

They were supported by other actors and theater owners.

Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, meanwhile introduced a bill providing for a Federal lottery, which, he estimated, would net the Treasury $5,000,000,000 annually and go a long way toward approaching the Roosevelt Administration's goal of $10,500,000,000 in additional taxes.

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, proposed an excess profits tax on individual income.

Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia put witnesses on the $2,140,000,000 tax increase bill before the committee at the rate of five an hour, and announced he heped to report the measure to the Senate "some time next week." He hopes the bill will be passed before Christmas.

W. J. Schieffelin of the New York State Chamber of Commerce, told the committee that in raising the liquor tax Congress would be "taxing the poor man's drink double that of the rich man." He figured the tax increase would be 60 cents a fifth on $3 whisky the same as $6 liquor.

Michael J. Quill, a New York City CIO official, advised taking a bigger cut of corporate earnings rather than applying heavy rates to workers earning less than $3000 a year.

Wiegand, lieutenant governor of the first division of the Capital District, who said the meeting will be held in the Jefferson Room beginning at 10 a. m.

Irving L. Diener, governor of the Kiwanis Capital District, will assist Wiegand in conducting the assembly, designated as a training school.

Those attending will be guests at a luncheon planned by the Washington Kiwanis Club. The program will be the Kiwanian national theme, "Keep America American."

Officers-elect from Alexandria who are heading the city's delegation include Thomas C. Graham, president; H. Atwood Hitch, first vice president; Windsor W. Demaine, jr., second vice president, and Lieut. Col. Everett A. Hellmuth, secretary-treasurer.

Morgan Beatty, radio news commentator and interpreter of war developments, will be guest speaker of the Alexandria club meeting at the Laura Lee Tea House today.

It's his 軍円 against your Dollars!

YES, Honorable Japanese glad to spend his 軍円 (his Japanese money) for more of his government's war bonds . . . look what they pay for . . .

Perhaps another sneak attack like Pearl Harbor. Another massacre like Wake Island. Ruthless pillage such as at Hong Kong, Manila, Singapore.

We can't afford to take these lying down. We'll dig down in our pockets now to buy more . . . and more . . . and more, until our bonds drive every Japanese and Nazi back into a corner with his hands up.

We'll pass up the unnecessary luxuries, pool our car riding, build so many ships, planes and tanks that every Jap will think he's fighting four Americans instead of one.

That's what will turn Joe Jap's war bonds into wastepaper . . . make him yell for peace as our enemies did in the last war.

Leatherneck

It is the peculiar genius or good fortune of America to produce great leadership in times of crisis. The United States Marine Corps, which has borne so heavy and vital a burden in this war, appears to have been specially gifted on this score. We should be obliged to lament the retirement of Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb as commandant of the Marine Corps were it not for the fact that he is to be succeeded by Lieut. Gen. Alexander Vandegrift. One can pay no higher compliment to either man than to say that he is the other's peer.

The Marine Corps, rank and file together, numbered 16,000 men when General Holcomb assumed command seven years ago. He will turn over to General Vandegrift on January 1 an elite body 300,000 strong—strong not only in numbers but also in an indefinable and incomparable esprit. Tarawa is but the latest testimonial to how well the traditions and the indomitable spirit of the Marine Corps have accompanied its growth under General Holcomb's stewardship.

The spirit of the Marines was imprinted upon Thomas Holcomb's character by 43 years of service among them. In turn he conveyed it to those who served under him. To one of the graduating classes at Quantico he said: "You will learn to be tough . . . tough in the best sense of the word. Tough does not mean the bully or the swaggering braggart. It means you will be men of courage and resolve . . . men of character and of training and discipline . . . men whose business it is to bring us victory." The code is a worthy one for all our officers in every service. It has lately acquired reason for reemphasis.

General Holcomb will retire at the end of this year by his own will, not because he is overage but because he has reached the age of retirement. He has enforced the retirement rule on others; therefore, as a matter of course, he enforces it upon himself. Happily he will be called to some other active duty. Like him, General Vandegrift has done all that he commanded others to do. At Guadalcanal, he earned the Congressional Medal of Honor for leading his men in their magnificent assault upon the Jap-held beaches. The luster of the Marine Corps will not tarnish in his care.

Legislative Sabotage

Ignoring the protests of Stabilization Director Vinson, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee has unanimously approved a resolution indorsing a wage increase of 8 cents per hour for nonoperating railway employes. If Congress should enact this measure, as it probably will unless some compromise settlement can be improvised hastily, the wage stabilization program might as well be given up for lost. We say that advisedly, without trying to weigh the relative merits of the arguments for and against the contention that the 8-cent increase would violate the Little Steel formula. This particular wage controversy cannot be settled to anyone's satisfaction by juggling with statistical formulae. It revolves around a much more important issue: namely, whether the stabilization director is to be upheld in his efforts to give effect to the wage stabilization program. For Congress to enact legislation explicitly repudiating a ruling declared by Judge Vinson to be vital to maintenance of that program would seriously impair his prestige and probably destroy his usefulness.

The fact that Congress is being urged to intervene because of the looming threat of a strike that would paralyze rail transportation makes yielding to pressure all the more indefensible. If the railway unions should succeed in their efforts to obtain legislative sanction of their demands by terroristic methods, we may be very sure that other groups of organized labor would conclude that they, too, are justified in resorting to coercion to obtain wage increases in disregard of stabilization programs and executive orders.

Sound And Fury

The American Legion in its wisdom recently selected Warren H. Atherton of Stockton, Calif., to succeed the vociferous Roane Waring as their national commander. No doubt this entitles Mr. Atherton to speak for those veterans of the last war who accept his leadership. To the best of our knowledge, however, he has not been authorized in any way to speak for the men who are now serving in our armed forces. Some remarks he delivered in their behalf on Sunday at a war bond sales meeting at the University of Notre Dame seem to us, on this account and for other reasons as well, singularly out of place.

"We'll start a bonfire that will burn that Washington squirrel cage down," said Mr. Atherton with a tact worthy of his predecessor, "unless the men returning from war get their just deserts." The threat, for all its banality and emptiness, is irritating. Who has suggested that the rights of these men be denied? Who has enthroned Mr. Atherton as their champion? We venture the prediction that when they come home they will speak for themselves—and will choose to advance their interests through the democratic processes they fought to preserve. And it is quite possible that, as veterans, they will want any organization which they join to be something more than a pressure group for their special advantage.

Rolling Up Japan

Our President has been keeping another rendezvous with destiny. It must have been evident to the careful newspaper reader that for the last two weeks or so the President has been abroad. The mystery lay in his destination and purpose. Now, as the first part of the story, we know with whom he has been conferring, and where. He and Mr. Churchill and Chiang Kai-shek have been in consultation in North Africa on the problems of the war with Japan and the peace thereafter. The pronouncement is exhilarating. In this war there has been a good deal of misunderstanding with China. In our preoccupation with the Hitler-first policy we have seemed neglectful of China's needs in the prosecution of the joint campaign against Japan. But any vexatious difference of opinion seems to have been buried in the North African statement. Unless we are vastly mistaken, a common strategy has been worked out, so that in its military phases the joint communique will rank with the Moscow declaration as a supreme demonstration of solidarity. In this respect the conclave has rung the knell on war lord Japan.

The Germans as their last card counted on disunity breaking out among the Allies. The Japanese had that card, and another card besides. Japan's hope of a separate peace with China was ended in North Africa as Germany's hope of a separate peace with Russia was ended in Moscow. Japan is left to count on the possibility that when the German is beaten—and they seem already to have written him off—the Allies will be so overcome by war weariness that they will agree to a patched-up peace. No such prospect can be gleaned from the joint communique. The same medicine of unconditional surrender is to be meted out to Japan as well as to Germany.

How the war will be waged in common to bring war lord Japan to the dust is, of course, a military secret. Doubtless it will not come to full fury till the Germans are beaten. But already in the Pacific the American Navy is pointing the dagger at Japan's vitals from the Gilbert Islands. In the southwest, MacArthur is being readied to push north against Japan's lines of communications with its ill-gotten Indonesian gains. Mountbatten in India is laying out a plan of campaign for the liberation of all the lands contiguous to China and for the relief of China. Vain is the expectation of Tojo and his cohorts that this triple-hammer blow will not be backed by united peoples. The end-result will be to make Dai Nippon (Great Japan) look like a gargantuan joke.

The joint statement pledges only three of the Big Four to this shattering emprise. But there is another nation which will assuredly participate in the coup de grace. We mean, of course, Russia. Russia did not subscribe in the North African declaration because she is in a technical state of neutrality vis-a-vis Japan. This state of things cannot last beyond the defeat of Germany. Russia has her own score to settle with the Japanese for aggressions on the Siberian frontier antedating the war on China. But the main reason for counting on her eleventh hour entry into the Far Eastern lists is that Russia will want to sit at any peace table at which the remapping of the new Far East is to be undertaken. She is a world power with a very definite and a progressive eastward slant. After all, Siberia, the most wonderful storehouse in the world, has saved Russia, and it is obvious that much of Russian energy in the next generation will be devoted to the development of Siberia's untold riches. It follows that the Russians will seek to round out this enterprise with their own notions of frontier security.

Russia's interest in the remapping of the Far East will be intensified by the Big Three's preliminary draft. What the new Far East modus as contemplated by the Big Three amounts to is a stripping of Japan down to her pre-Perry condition. That means that she will have to relinquish the spoils of four wars back to and including the 1895 war with China. One of these wars was the Russo-Japanese war in 1904-05 which deprived Russia, inter alia, of rail and other interests in Manchuria. Thus, in any deprivation and disposal of the spoils of Japanese conquest in the last 50 years, Russia will seek to have a voice. And, if there is to be peace in Asia after Japan is beaten, that voice must be invited.

This factor does not introduce any discordant note in the decisions arrived at in North Africa. It was merely force of circumstances that prevented the Russians from taking part in the Anglo-American-Chinese parley. We must rely upon the tempo of events to bring the Russians into the new Far Eastern concert. Fortunately, the way was paved at the Moscow conference. The spirit that animated that conference is an assurance that the same spirit will govern the Far Eastern decisions when they have to be reviewed with Moscow. For that spirit conveyed the suggestion of a concert covering the entire globe. What was done in North Africa will hasten the day of Russian participation in the war and in the peace. The Banzai boys in Tokyo by this time know it. Sooner or later they will rue the day they set the Orient in flames.

Badly Kept Secret

Now that there has been an official communique concerning the meeting "in North Africa" of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, the point must be made that either through machiavellian design or outrageous negligence it was the worst-kept secret of the war. Weeks ago the usually ironclad censorship at Cairo allowed a story to get out that the guests at a certain well-known hotel were being told to move because their rooms were needed for certain unnamed but illustrious personalities who were to meet in Cairo. It was not strange, therefore, that within a matter of hours the Vichy radio began to broadcast the rumor of a meeting of Allied leaders in Cairo. The ice being broken, rumors of such a conference began to cover the horizon.

Then, on Tuesday of this week, a Lisbon report circulated by Reuter's, the British news agency, declared that it was "known definitely" in the Portuguese capital that the Cairo meeting had already taken place, and that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill had departed for Iran to meet with Marshal Stalin. This report, which the Axis promptly seized upon and broadcast with propagandist embellishments about the meeting, has aroused our own Elmer Davis, Director of the Office of War Information, to a quite legitimate protest. "If there were a conference," he said, "we could assume from past experience that there would be some arrangement for a simultaneous release in all capitals involved. . . . If there were no conference, then, the story would be an invention. Either way it (publication of the news) is equally reprehensible."

Reuter's reply to this castigation is to declare that the Lisbon message was the "result of spontaneous journalistic enterprise" by the chief of its bureau in the Portuguese capital. In view of the fact that by this time the story of that conference was kicking around everywhere, it did not take very much enterprise by the Reuter's man to compile and circulate the rumors. The authority of Reuter's exacerbated the gaffe. Because of Reuter's close and intimate relations with the British government, its imprimatur on the story gave it a verisimilitude it had not possessed at the time the Axis and satellite radios were spreading it. One shudders to think of the possible consequences of rumors which were so evidently close to the mark. Obviously somebody blundered. The leaks throughout the affair demand a thorough investigation.

Tabu Or Not Tabu?

The lecture by Dr. Max Lederer before the Writers' Club of the Library of Congress earlier this week emphasizes our relative freedom from those ultrapatriotic tabus which in modern times have usually prevailed in nations at war. Dr. Lederer's subject was German literature, and on the whole he seems to have spoken favorably of it. American publishers bring out the work of modern German poets like Rilke and George, and in the classrooms American professors go on talking more or less respectfully about Kant, Hegel, Fichte, Vaihinger and even Nietzsche. Meanwhile the broadcasting stations send out the music not only of Bach, Beethoven and Brahms but also of Richard Wagner, now recognized as a spiritual ancestor of the Nazis, and Richard Strauss, who is, or was, a supporter of the Nazi regime. This is, indeed, a far cry from the bigotries and chauvinism of 1917-18, when merely to utter words like Sauerkraut or Wienerwurst was tantamount to treason, and groups of vigilantes would break up concerts whenever a lady soprano attempted to sing Gounod's Ave Maria, which they curiously mistook for a bit of German grand opera.

However, this new aesthetic toleration has its limits, and wartime tabus have not disappeared entirely. Most of the Gilbert and Sullivan repertory companies, for example, seem to have dropped The Mikado for the duration. And, come to think of it, we cannot recall any production since December 7, 1941, of Puccini's Madame Butterfly, once such a favorite of American operagoers. The pitiful story of how the gentle and loving Cio Cio San was betrayed by the heartless and faithless Lieutenant (j.g.) Pinkerton, USN, seems somewhat less congruous now than in those innocent days when Geraldine Farrar used to open wide our tear ducts with the aria, Un bel di vredimo.

We suspect poor Cio Cio San's confidence that one fine day an American warship with her lieutenant aboard would steam into the harbor of Nagasaki, Japan, would now be the signal not for a gentle rhythmic sobbing in six flats but for a tempest of whistles, cheers, footstamping and handclapping. So it will be very interesting to see whether the Writers' Club of the Library of Congress invites anybody to lecture to them about the Genji Monogatari, the Kokinshu, the Hyaku-Nin-Issu and other masterpieces of Japanese literature.

WHO DARE SAY?

With the last of the leaves
The warmth is going,
Slowly and subtly
As tides out-flowing.

Though soon shall fall
The ultimate gold,
Soon the bright air
Be edged with cold,

Who dare say
When the moment came
That loosed the leaf
And lost the flame?

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Yanks In Bermuda

NO PLACE in this hemisphere has been more thoroughly transformed by the war than Bermuda. The quiet little 24-mile-long island now has a big American base at each end, and its swank hotels are filled with Americans.

The boom atmosphere that is Bermuda today has given rise to friction here and there, according to United States Government employes who have just returned from the island after spending nearly three years there. But the Yanks and Bermudians get along well enough together, everything considered.

More English than the English themselves, the Bermudians at first feared that the influx of Americans and the bases that they built might impair the island's sovereignty. This was especially true since the United States had not yet entered the war in the spring of 1941.

Symbolic was the automobile issue. Before the war, autos were barred from Bermuda's roads and lanes. The colonists preferred their carriages, bicycles and tiny local railroad because these preserved the nineteenth century character of the place and somehow concealed the minute size of the island.

Grumbling Over Autos

Today Army jeeps and trucks and Navy station wagons are everywhere, stirring up the dust and forcing the Bermudians to wear kerchiefs over their mouths when they go cycling in dry weather. There is some grumbling over this, but the islanders have accepted the new order of things. The Bermuda assembly, in fact, recently voted to allow automobiles after the war—subject to a high tax on nonmilitary vehicles, to keep the number down.

In many respects, however, Bermuda remains much as it was in prewar days. The local aristocrats—the Trimminghams, the Outerbridges, the Trotts and their satellites—still run the island. They have maintained the semifeudal property qualifications for voting, and the still higher property requirement for election to the Assembly. They hold themselves aloof from the average run of enlisted Americans, although they do associate with the officers at the bases.

A sore point with these Bermudians is the servant shortage. Many a dowager who had always paid her various servants $4 a week now finds herself forced to do her own housework. Some 20,000 of the island's 32,000 people are colored; and thousands of these, together with the poorer whites, now find it much more profitable to work for the Americans.

Most Bermudians realize that the island would be in a bad way had it not been for the Americans. The war had cut off the tourist trade and the lily business, which were Bermuda's mainstays, and German submarines had interrupted the shipment of supplies from England.

The arrival of some 400 imperial censorship workers helped a little, but the shops were almost empty and thousands of children were undernourished when the Americans arrived. Now American money and lend-lease supplies have given the island the greatest prosperity it has yet known.

Yankee Soldiers

As for the thousands of Yankee soldiers and sailors, they love the colorful island when they first arrive. But after a few months they are apt to be discontented for several reasons:

1. Bermuda has few facilities for amusing the boys in their off hours. Many of them rent rooms at the USO center or in the hotels nearby in order to "get away from the post" when they get a 72-hour leave.

2. Americans are popular among the local English and Portuguese girls, but there aren't enough girls to go around. Many a USO dance is attended by 200 men and 20 girls. A recent false rumor that three new female clerks were en route from Washington caused a major sensation at the bases, as did an earlier report—also without foundation—that a group of WACS was coming over.

3. Many of the boys have been on the island for two years or more without a furlough in the States. Some have children at home whom they've never seen. Bermuda is only about 600 miles off Cape Hatteras, but transportation is uncertain and too expensive. Air transportation costs $80 each way, and ships are too slow and irregular.

4. To top it off, the servicemen feel that the war has passed them by. In the first few months of war it was touch and go, with everything blacked out at night and submarines lurking offshore. But today the war seems remote.

A common question among the soldiers is, "What are you going to tell your children when they ask you what you did in the war?" The usual answer: "Tell 'em I sat it out on a little island in the middle of the Gulf Stream."

Many of the boys feel that the best Christmas present Uncle Sam could give them would be a chance to move on to the fighting fronts. Bermuda is all right as a training ground, they say, but they are more than anxious to give up their billets on the quiet isle for a little action, and let some fresh recruits come in for training.

The next best thing would be for a system of furloughs, complete with transportation, for married servicemen who have been on the island for a year or more.

Two Great Conferences

THE CONFIRMATION, at long last, of the persistent and widespread rumors of a meeting between the Allied "Big Three" or "Big Four" has, fortunately, produced no such reaction of disappointment as accompanied the official disclosures regarding the Casablanca and Quebec conferences.

The announcement of the Casablanca conference, it will be recalled, was preceded by a drumfire of cryptic warnings of important news to come, with the result that anticipations were aroused that could not be satisfied.

A meeting in Africa between the American President and the British Prime Minister and their military advisers was a dramatic event. But the communique that was issued after their meeting was vague and unrevealing.

The same was true of the Quebec parley which, unlike Casablanca, was held, at least so far as its outward trappings were concerned, in the full glare of publicity.

AT QUEBEC, as at Casablanca, the discussions were primarily and predominantly, though not wholly, military. But insofar as they were military, the agreements reached at those conferences had necessarily to be kept hidden from the public gaze.

No one can argue with such a decision. But, as a result, it meant that the hopes these meetings had aroused could not speedily and dramatically be fulfilled.

Military problems were undoubtedly taken up at the meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. But their principal concern, as the joint communique issued on Wednesday night makes clear, was political matters, particularly the disposition of the Japanese empire following the defeat of Japan.

The overshadowing importance of the Roosevelt-Churchill-Chiang conference lies not so much in what was there agreed upon but that the meeting was held at all. And the same is likely to hold true of the conference, no official announcement of which has as yet been forthcoming, between Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

EACH OF THESE great Allied leaders has had to travel some distance beyond his own borders to reach the meeting place.

This fact is of practical as well as symbolic significance. It means, in the first place, that problems of mutual concern to the four powers have reached a point of urgency where, for a while at least, they take precedence over problems which these leaders have to grapple with in their own countries.

The war has reached a point where, as Lord Halifax said recently, anything may now happen. None of the Allied powers can afford, on that account, to relax its efforts in the slightest. But the possibility of a sudden collapse, at least in the case of Germany, must be taken into account as well as the possibility that through an increase in diplomatic, psychological and military pressures the day of collapse can be hastened.

But the fact that the four Allied leaders have had to travel some distance to reach the meeting place is also symbolic of the circumstance that in their future relations harmony will depend on a readiness by each of these powers to meet the others part way.

IN THE POSTWAR ERA the world will face problems as difficult, as tangled, as heart-breaking as any we have had to contend with in wartime. If these problems are to be solved we shall need every ounce of patience and good will and cooperative spirit that the United Nations possess. Division among them would be fatal.

At Moscow, recently, a brilliant start was made. But it was only a start. For at Moscow many problems of importance, such as the problem of what we are to do with Germany, were left in the air. They cannot be left in the air indefinitely for the tide of events is moving swiftly and if we are not quick enough to ride that tide it will ride us.

That is why both President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have been so eager to meet with their opposite numbers from China and Russia. That is why the meeting in Africa and its sequel, presumably in Persia, are of such surpassing importance both for their dramatic content and their political potentialities.

These meetings constitute the best possible news for the Allied peoples. By the same token they cast long shadows of impending doom over our enemies. The military coalitions which Germany and Japan have been trying to break have proved unbreakable. Now the political coalitions which our Far Eastern and European enemies face are being cemented more closely both within themselves and with each other. At long last we are now on the verge of fighting politically as well as militarily, a global war globally.

Peace Plan

The following is submitted as an outline for a world peace plan:

I. The establishment of an economic union of nations.

A. The abolition of all trade barriers between nations.

B. The establishment of an international bank, owned, controlled and operated by the respective nations involved.

1. The monetary systems of such nations shall be based upon economic goods and services, bearing scientific and mathematical relations thereto; and, each such system shall be equitably coordinated with each and all, through the international bank.

C. There shall be no kind or character of political union between the United States and any nation, with each nation retaining its own sovereignty inviolable.

II. The extension of the jurisdiction of the present World Court to include matters of international economic concern.

III. A 10 years' military alliance between the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China, with an invitation to all other "United Nations" to join such alliance.

A. The purpose of such military alliance is to preserve the peace, thereby permitting the proper functioning of the economic union of nations until it will stand alone.

B. Any extension of such 10 years' military alliance is not deemed necessary.

"Small Pickings"

I, too, have read Mr. Lippmann's column—"The A, B, C of Subsidies"—but, unlike Mr. Walter P. Cotton, I consider Mr. Lippmann's conclusions sound. In The Post of November 7, Mr. Cotton pleaded for correction of Mr. Lippmann's "misinterpretation." I feel that it is Mr. Cotton who needs correction.

Mr. Lippmann's principal conclusion, reached admittedly through an oversimplified example, was that the amount paid in subsidies is less than the amount that would have been paid in higher prices. This is the important fact in the anti-inflation program. The conclusion is true for agricultural commodities as well as for commodities like copper.

One needs only to observe the operation of subsidies in his immediate surroundings. Take the subsidy on milk paid to dealers in the District of Columbia. It is one-half cent a quart. Remove the subsidy and the price will go up at least a full cent. Any milk dealer in town will confirm this.

Dorothy Thompson put her finger on this when she said in her broadcast of November 8 that subsidies are "small pickings." Take away the subsidy of 4½ cents a pound on butter, and the price of butter will be well on its way toward $1 a pound. And so it is with all subsidies on agricultural commodities.

For The Record

There appeared in your paper on November 24 a story that Witt & Co., a meat wholesaler here, admitted price ceiling violations and agreed to pay the Government damages as asked in a suit filed by the Office of Price Administration. The articles failed to state who are the owners of the company and the former owners, Mr. James Witt and Mrs. Dora Witt, husband and wife, have received many telephone calls in reference to same. Mr. and Mrs. Witt sold their interest to Mr. Samuel Kolker on March 1, 1943 and have had no interest in Witt & Co. since the date of sale.

I do not believe it is asking too much if a statement was run in your paper to the effect that Mr. James Witt and Mrs. Dora Witt are no longer connected with Witt & Co. and were not involved in the price ceiling violation.

Postwar Housing

In your issue of The Post Sunday, November 21, there appeared an article by Mr. Douglass Whitlock in reference to postwar housing.

I wonder if Mr. Whitlock is aware of the fact that the programming department of the numerous housing divisions of the United States Government was established by executive order and that the purpose for their being has expired.

True, they have mulcted the whole building industry by their seizure of control of building materials, but where does Mr. Whitlock get the idea by threats of Government control he can now mulct the postwar program and create a permanent bureau for this useless expenditure of public funds?

According to their own statements, there is no further need for priorities here in Washington. Then why the bureau? To continue this bureau will mean a strangulation of private initiative. This, I contend, is not consistent with the Four Freedoms. It is socialistic.

The results of several elections last month probably gave these boys the thought they better get in line before 1944 or be out, so they suggest that private industry waste their time and money to further the bureaucrats' time by giving them something to talk about.

Day Of Reckoning

By Paul Winkler

Occupied Norway

SETTING TO work on what will be one of the primary postwar tasks of all the occupied countries—clearing collaborationists out of the seats of power—the Norwegian government in London has appointed former Public Prosecutor Andreas Aulie chief of Norwegian police forces, with the immediate mission of preparing the prosecution of Norway's war criminals.

Aulie, who is 46, escaped from Norway to Sweden early this year, with the special purpose of aiding the government in the task which he has now been selected to direct. He smuggled out with him a considerable amount of data with which to establish files on the cases of those Norwegians who have aided the Germans. This data will be augmented from now on by evidence accumulated both outside and inside of Norway, and when the country is finally liberated, the returning government will know at once the identity of many of the persons who must be removed from office and prosecuted.

Aulie himself believes that his first task on reentering Norway will have to be the creation of a new police force to replace the existing organization.

New Force Prepared

Therefore Aulie intends to go into Norway with a new force prepared in advance for the task of purging unsound elements from the governmental machine. He feels that it is important that all members of the police force should have a wholly democratic outlook. It used once to be considered that the political ideas of individual policemen were of little importance, as long as their professional capacities were satisfactory; but in the present circumstances, with the struggle between democracy and antidemocracy going on in all nations, with the police serving often as the instrument of one tendency or the other, the neutrality of the arm of the law in an unneutral situation is no longer desirable. Aulie believes he must do in reverse what the Fascistically inclined Prefect of Police of Paris, Jean Chiappe, did when he packed his police force with anti-democrats.

In Norway, the Quisling administration seems to be attempting in advance to make Aulie's task more difficult. Arrests and dismissals of policemen suspected of applying little zeal to their tasks are increasing. Vidkun Quisling and Jonas Lie, proNazi police ministers of Norway, are doing their best to compromise those remaining officers held over from the old regime who have not yet given way to collaborationism.

It will be a delicate question, in some cases, to determine where mere opportunism ends and willing collaborationism begins. For police officers who remained in their positions under the Quisling government, even though they were not fond of their new masters, the breaking point at which they rebel against their orders comes at varying levels. Thus Gunner Eilifsen, chief of civilian police, followed instructions, and arrested Norwegian men who failed to report in answer to a mobilization call, but drew the line at arresting women when that was demanded of him. As a result, he was executed for "disobedience." But it's a question whether, if Norway had been liberated before he reached his personal saturation point of collaborationism, he wouldn't have been punished for not having disobeyed earlier.

Punishment to Fit Crime

Punishment, of course, will be graduated to fit the crime, and it will not be forgotten that some officeholders have simply remained in their places and carried on administrative functions without contributing directly to the German effort to enslave the country. But for those who deliberately sought to take advantage of their country's defeat to further their own personal ambitions, punishment will be more severe than it used to be in Norway's prewar days of mildness. Capital punishment, long outlawed there, was restored two years ago by the exile government, which announced its intention of maintaining it after the war—obviously for the punishment of traitors.

It is estimated that the number of traitors in Norway does not exceed 1 per cent of the population (or 30,000 persons), which is about the estimate for other occupied countries. The highest figure ever given for Nasjonal Samling membership was 35,000; but it is certain that many of these were not die-hard Fascists, but reluctant joiners whose only interest was preserving such personal positions as jobs in government bureaus. After each Allied victory, the party loses members.

If it seems premature to begin to track down the traitors today, it must be remembered that incriminating evidence now available may have disappeared by the day of liberation. In Italy, the Fascists burned many incriminating files establishing the activities of various persons under the German domination, to prevent their punishment, and in Vichy it is said that a large number of files of the same type are kept apart, with orders that they be destroyed immediately in case of invasion.

Today And Tomorrow

The Cairo Declaration

THE DECLARATION of Cairo is a weighty confirmation of the view that the Moscow agreements inaugurated a genuine understanding.

THE DECLARATION is a commitment to destroy the modern Japanese Empire and to confine the Japanese to the island territory which they possessed before they began their campaigns of conquest a half a century ago. When the terms announced at Cairo have been put into effect, Japan will cease to be a great power capable of waging aggressive war. She will have been ousted from the mainland of Asia—from China, Manchuria and Korea—and she will have lost the material resources and the strategic positions for conducting a continental war against Russia and China. She will have been ousted from Formosa, which she conquered in 1896, from all the islands of the Pacific, which she used to envelop the Philippines, and of course from all her recent conquests. She will then have lost the means to wage an oceanic war against anyone.

LIPPMANN

For the most obvious reason Stalin could not be present at the Cairo conference to sign the Declaration. But he had already agreed at Moscow to recognize China, which is the great gainer of territory in the Cairo agreement, as one of the four principal guardians of the coming peace. It is self-evident that Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt could not and would not have announced the terms of settlement in the Far East if they did not know that when they went on from their meeting with Chiang Kai-shek to their meeting with Stalin, the decision would already have been regarded as fully in Russia's interest. We could not have more conclusive evidence at this time that on the greater issues which most vitally affect the four great powers there is a solid understanding. This provides the solid foundation of a concerted global strategy in the prosecution of the war and its settlement.

Without this solid foundation of agreement among the great powers, nothing substantial in the way of a larger organization of peace would be possible. In fact without this core of agreement among the great powers, a larger organization would easily and almost certainly become a focus of disunity and rivalry.

BRITAIN AND America are committed by this declaration to restore the territorial integrity of China not only as it existed before the Japanese aggression of 1931 in Manchuria, but as it existed in 1895 before the conquest of Formosa in the first Sino-Japanese war. Thus Republican China is to recover even that which Imperial China lost.

This means that one of the main pillars of Allied policy is to rely upon China as a great power in eastern Asia. The other pillar is Russia. For this declaration means that with the liquidation of the Japanese empire, the Russians intend to pursue their policy of friendship with China. This is not a new policy for Soviet Russia. On the contrary it has been the underlying Russian policy for the past 20 years, and even in 1941 when Russia was most gravely threatened by the German-Japanese combination, the Russians were never willing to appease Japan at the expense of China. The Russians signed a neutrality pact with Japan on April 13, 1941, two months before the German invasion, to avoid having to fight on two fronts. At this time the United States was also neutral, and moreover unprepared. But even then the Russians refused to do what the Japanese asked them to do, to agree on the division of Asia at the expense of China into Russian and Japanese spheres of influence.

THE RUSSIAN policy, like our own, like any other great policy in foreign affairs, rests finally not on sentiments of friendship but on an enlightened conception of an enduring national interest. Russia, which will have a tremendous development in Siberia, needs peace on her Asiatic land frontiers and secure access to the Pacific Ocean. The friendship of a satisfied China and the exclusion of Japan from the mainland are the best guaranties of peace on her land frontiers. The liquidation of Japan's maritime empire and naval power in the Pacific is the best assurance that Russian Siberia will have free access to the sea. Thus the Cairo declaration conforms to the Russian as well as to the Chinese interest. Since both China and Russia gain infinitely more in combination than they could gain as rivals, the prospects of tranquillity in eastern Asia are now good.

It is no less evident that Britain and America have acted in their own highest interests. Their primary interest is to perpetuate the alliance with Russia and China, and never to let it be ruptured by differences over secondary matters. For on the perpetuation of this alliance it depends whether or not this is the last great war for some generations at the least.

BUT, IN FACT, the more solid the agreement of interest among the great powers, the more statesmanlike can be the solution of other problems. Take, for example, the problem of making the Philippines not only independent but secure. With Japan, the only hostile naval power, deprived of all the Pacific Islands, and with China in Formosa, and with Russia invincibly secure in Vladivostok, the defense of the Philippines can be organized as it was never organized before. Military agreements between China, the Philippines, and the United States about naval and air bases in Formosa, larger military agreements by the British, the Dutch, the French, the Portugese, the Russians, the Chinese, and ourselves covering the whole basin of the Pacific are now politically and strategically feasible.

In this setting the Philippines can be made secure, and questions which the unthinking have raised about the remote islands, where we have had to improvise bases during this war, will fall into their proper perspective and cease to be very interesting or important.

THE NUCLEUS of the coming order of things is set and is being welded together. Around it there will cohere, not by abstractions, fictions, and generalities, but by bonds of interest and reliability, an ever larger number of nations—until gradually but surely the world is organized, not by paper charters but in fact, for its own security.

Postoffice Meddling in Strike Charged

By the Associated Press

A statement by a Montgomery Ward Co. spokesman that the Postoffice Department curtailed its mail service in support of a strike at the company's Portland, Oreg., plant in May, 1941, brought a demand from a congressional committee yesterday for a prompt explanation.

Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, chairman of the special House committee investigating acts of executive agencies, said he would ask Postmaster General Walker or one of his aides for an explanation at today's committee meeting.

"How come?" Smith asked when John A. Barr, attorney for Montgomery Ward, told of the curtailment.

Barr commented that the action "obviously" was taken to support the strike in which the AFL Teamsters Union demanded a closed shop.

The manager of the Portland store, Barr told the committee, was notified by the Portland postmaster that he had received the curtailment order "from Washington."

Barr's testimony, given as the committee entered the second day of hearings on War Labor Board actions, was devoted largely to Montgomery Ward's dealings with the Board.

The company's main differences with the Board, Barr said, resulted from orders requiring union security clauses in contracts dictated by the Board.

Barr contended that since his company did not engage in any war business and held no war contracts, the WPB had no jurisdiction in its labor disputes.

Pearl Harbor Holiday Vetoed

President Roosevelt expects of the future a day of glory which can be set aside to honor the men of the American armed forces more fittingly than the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, a day of disaster stemming from "infamy."

He indicated that confidence in a message to Congress yesterday vetoing a resolution designating December 7 as Armed Services Honor Day.

"I consider the commemoration of the day fixed in the measure to be singularly inappropriate," the message said, adding that it seemed premature to fix now a day to honor those who have served in the present war, concluding:

"I think a more suitable date can be selected for this purpose, and that future events will ordain the proper date for such a commemoration."

The President said the anniversary of the Japanese sneak attack "is a day that is remembered in this country as one of infamy on the part of a treacherous enemy," and "requires no reminder."

Steel Union Seeks 17 Cent Hourly Raise

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP).—Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steelworkers of America, announced today the steelworkers' international executive board had recommended a "general wage adjustment" of 17 cents an hour for 500,000 "basic steel" workers.

The recommendations now are being studied by the union's wage and policy committee, Murray said. Representatives will carry the program back to their 475 union locals for approval.

The present basic hiring rate in the steel industry is 78 cents an hour.

The CIO Automobile Workers and the Aluminum Workers International Unions already have recommended wage increases in their industries in line with the CIO's announced intention of having the "little steel" formula abandoned as a wage yardstick.

The USW recommendations, Murray said, apply to the 475 plants which have either a 20-day or 30-day clause in their contracts with the union providing for the reopening of negotiations.

Demands On Chrysler

Detroit, Dec. 1 (AP).—Leo Lamotte, national director of the Chrysler department of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), said today the union has presented formal demands for a wage increase for approximately 70,000 Chrysler Corp. employes.

The Union recently made similar demands on the Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corp. and smaller manufacturers.

Dame May Whitty Pays Capital a Brief Visit; Theater News and Gossip

DAME MAY WHITTY, distinguished actress and gracious lady, direct from a "personal appearance" on Capitol Hill, where she gave testimony before the Pepper senatorial committee probing the matter of juvenile delinquency, was honor guest of Carter T. Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., at a press luncheon yesterday. . . . The drama desks were fresh out of a preview screening of "Madame Curie," in which Dame May plays a brief but important part. . . . This woman of brilliant intellect and manifold talents was making her first visit to Washington—and a lamentably fleeting one—in what she estimated to be 50 years. . . . The first since she appeared here with Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry—"which must have been about 50 years ago, because Ben Webster and I had just been married and we recently celebrated our golden wedding anniversary." . . . Having only recently completed her role in "Gaslight," costarring Charles Boyer and Ingrid Bergman, Dame May was accorded a three-week respite from the M-G-M studios in Culver City to enjoy a vacation in the East and a round of playgoing. . . . She was in New York only long enough to see her daughter's (Margaret Webster's) production of "Othello" and the new Katharine Cornell play—which she deems one of its star's most effective vehicles—when it was gently suggested by the "high command" that she come to Washington to lend the Senate the benefit of her wealth of experience with the young, not so much as delinquents as problems of which the English are acutely aware as a result of the war and consequent evacuation of large numbers of British children . . . The British film colony in Hollywood, of which Dame May has been a member since 1940, has sponsored and is sponsoring large groups of English children in this country for the duration, in addition to its many other contributions to the war effort on both sides of the Atlantic . . . What they have learned, the Senate now knows.

Abreast of Times

A brilliant conversationalist, with a keen eye to world affairs and a sharp wit, Dame May is abreast of the international problems of the day, perhaps a shade beyond many to whom it is, or should be, a primary concern. . . . Her chief fear, like so many others, is that the winning of the peace will prove a much harder nut to crack than the winning of the war. . . . She also wonders why it is that Washington boasts but one legitimate theater. . . . That very evidently is still where her heart is, despite the enormous contributions she has made to the genuine distinction of the cinema . . . Her performance in "Mrs. Miniver" was one of that picture's most valuable assets. . . . Similarly, she adds greatly to the quality of charm to be found in "Lassie Come Home" and "Madame Curie," both of which will be coming along to a loewcal Loew screen in due course. . . . Although choice seats had been reserved for her for Tuesday night's performance at the National, the New York train was just late enough to prevent her attendance. . . . "The Patriots" is one play she is particularly anxious to see . . . Is eager to have it interpret for her precisely what is meant by "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Whose life, whose liberty and whose happiness? . . . Feels that a firm understanding of that is essential to the working out of the peace. . . . Sidney Kingsley's play will in large measure provide the answer—when, as and if she ever gets to see it. . . . A delightful person, Dame May Whitty, fluent, amusing and exhilarating.

Film of Timely Value

As for "Madame Curie"—we had just then viewed it, remember?—it not only reunites Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon as costars, but would be an important picture even in the hands of a less superior cast. . . . Not only relates an absorbing story of a great achievement, but is additionally valuable at this time by reason of its splendid lesson in devotion to duty, perseverance and world service, of which the races at the moment stands in such desperate need . . . It will not be immediately on view, but soon . . . The immediately on view bills will be about as they have been this past week, except that Red Skelton will be taking over the screen at Loew's Capitol today in a little something known as "Whistling in Brooklyn"—if there is any good reason why anybody should be . . . With "Old Acquaintance" holding over, the Earle's next will be "In Old Oklahoma," the ripsnorter from Republic, with John Wayne and Martha Scott costarred . . . Instead of "Lassie Come Home," Twentieth Century-Fox's "Guadalcanal Diary" will follow the current "Girl Crazy," at the Palace . . . Olsen and Johnson will be coming into RKO-Keith's on the heels of "The North Star," in their latest insanity, "Crazy House" . . . "Jeannie," by every right of excellence, should go on and on for weeks at the Little . . . "Claudia" will be picking up its run at the Columbia today and tomorrow the Metropolitan will permit "Princess O'Rourke" to carry on . . . Julie Haydon, the Patsy Jefferson in "The Patriots," is one who feels that "the show must go on" . . . In spite of a bad throat and a temperature hovering in the vicinity of 100 degrees on Monday afternoon, she went on that night and delivered a flawless performance on the occasion of the opening of the two-week run of the Kingsley play . . . Too late to provide fodder for this column, Dunninger, the mentalist, headlining the new stage bill at the Capitol, was cocktailed at the Willard yesterday afternoon at 4:30 . . . In the Variety Club on December 2, at 8 p. m., the cocktailing will be done at a press meeting with Gypsy Rose Lee, who will be down from New York as honor guest of the Washington Newspaper Guild's Front Page Ball . . . Wouldn't mind being a Dunninger myself for that one evening!

LEONARD LYONS

Record of the Broadway Pulsebeat

New York, Dec. 1.—Charles E. Wilson was induced by Jimmy Byrnes to withdraw his resignation from the War Production Board. By the time Wilson reached the WPB offices, to get back his letter of resignation, Donald M. Nelson already had released it to the press. Wilson, however, will remain until the President releases him . . . Last month American submarines sank more Japanese shipping than in any month of the war . . . Walter White of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People is in Africa, studying minority problems . . . The entertainment industry's 75,000-star service flag, with 250 gold stars, will be unfuried December 7 in Times Square.

GYPSY ROSE LEE

Harry Kaufman, who produces shows in association with the Shuberts, gave Moss Hart's Air Force show, "Winged Victory," the highest praise a producer could possibly give. "I love this show," Kaufman protested, tapping his breast. "I own 15 per cent of it—in my heart" . . . Bill Huie, author of 'The Fight for Air Power," just returned from Navy duty in the Aleutians. His fellow Southerner, James Street, told him: "Bill, ah tol' 'em all, Bill Huie's up thayer, fightin' them Japs and Yanks" . . . Greer Garson reports that when she was doing "Madame Curie," MGM had many scientists around to see that her portrayal of the discoverer of radium was scientifically correct. "Now, when I turn out the light," says Miss Garson, "I give out a glow."

The expert estimates on the money "Winged Victory" will raise for Army Emergency Relief are over $10,000,000 . . . George Jessel went to Georgia for the Army conference, lecturing the troops on how to entertain themselves . . . The murals painted by Diego Rivera for Mike Todd's production of "Mexican Hayride" will not be used . . . Gypsy Rose Lee is planning a progressive dinner party, where her guests will have appetizers at her house on East 63rd st. and then have the rest of the courses served, progressively, at the homes of her neighbors on the same block. "We'll wind up for dessert at the house across the street—Samuel Seabury's," vows Gypsy. "I haven't met him yet, but we'll get in there somehow—even if I have to get myself appointed as air-raid warden."

Wing Commander Gibson, who was decorated for his feat in destroying the German dams, tells of the first speech he made after his return. Churchill had promised Gibson that he wouldn't be in the room during the speech—but Churchill was there. "Tell me, frankly, what you thought of it?" asked Gibson. Churchill told him: "Not a very good speech. But a lot better than I could have done at your age." . . . Harry Cohn, head of Columbia Films, left New York to return to Hollywood, with a doctor and nurse in attendance on the train . . . Robert E. Sherwood, who was to have gone to the Pacific, canceled the trip. He's home, curing a cold.

Leon Henderson may return to the political scene next fall as a candidate for the Senate from New Jersey, his home State . . . Henderson, who was a captain in ordnance during the last war, visited some of his former officers in Washington. "We think we could use you here, Leon," they told him. "How about coming with us?" . . . Henderson glanced at the silver eagles and the generals' stars on the uniforms around him. "Would I be a major general?" he answered. "Because I was smarter than you in '18, and I still am smarter than you."

Arthur Schwartz, the composer whose newest hit — "They're Either Too Young or Too Old," written in collaboration with Frank Loesser—is No. 2 on the "Hit Parade," has become a film producer. He did "Cover Girls" for Columbia. Schwartz signed Jerome Kern to write the music—Kern, who has been his idol for more than 25 years . . . Schwartz therefore felt embarrassed when, at the conferences, the famed composer played his new music, and Schwartz had to disapprove of some. Kern wrote on each of these scripts "ADL," and played the next one . . . When the conference was over Composer-Producer Arthur Schwartz asked Jerome Kern: "Please tell me—I've got to know—what does 'ADL' stand for?" Kern told him: "Arthur Doesn't Like."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IF THE ARMY AND NAVY really want to save manpower and postpone the drafting of fathers, they might take a leaf from the book of venerable Admiral William Leahy, the President's chief of staff. No private guards or orderlies clutter his house, as they do those of certain other high-ranking persons. Instead, the admiral answers the door himself.

But if your approach the home of Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet, a guard stops you on the grounds of the Naval Observatory while another guard is posted in front of the admiral's house. At this stage of the war it is inconceivable that an enemy might molest Admiral King's home. Joke is that the armed guards are posted outside a home which the admiral rarely occupies, for he usually sleeps on his yacht on the Potomac.

These driblets of manpower are not important taken singly, but they are when you add them up. Lump together the lonely soldiers who still stand guard around the perfectly safe halls of Congress, plus the heavy battery of regular troops which supplement the regular and efficient White House guards, plus all the other sentries standing watch around drowsy offices—and you get quite a total.

Jessie Jones, for instance, still requires a battery of guards to scrutinize visitors entering his Commerce Building when there is nothing inside which the enemy would want—except the fish aquarium in the basement. So does Henry Morgenthau require guards. Government personnel and budgets could be reduced by thousands now that the war has improved and J. Edgar Hoover has proved there is little enemy danger from within.

Good Neighbors

INSIDE FACT about Senator Butler's attack on the Good Neighbor policy is that the Nebraskan was given most of his ammunition by the U. S Embassies in Latin America. Unfortunate truth is that a lot of career diplomats distrust the two-fisted reform tactics of the Rockefeller Office and were glad to spill their views to a listening Senator.

Butler spent only two days in some countries. He hardly had time to get beyond the U. S. Embassy and the fashionable clubs frequented by American business men.

In Rio, for example, Ambassador Jefferson Caffery told him, "at the rate we are pouring money into the Amazon, it will cost us hundreds of dollars for every pound of rubber." Ambassador Messersmith in Mexico City, who had a long-standing feud with the BEW, was glad to tell Butler that agencies outside the State Department were muddying the waters of diplomacy.

Thus, Butler's report is an explosive symposium of all the complaints of U. S. diplomats who don't like to be speeded up by aggressive young Nelson Rockefeller, plus the complaints of United States business men who distrust Federal spending anywhere.

However, the Butler probe may crack together the heads of United States representatives and teach them to cooperate The cure for Butler's complaints is not cancellation of the Good Neighbor program but better teamwork among United States agencies in foreign countries.

Exit Paul McNutt?

MANPOWER COMMISSIONER Paul McNutt is reported burning the midnight oil drafting a veto message for the President to send regarding the new draft bill passed by Congress. That bill would place fathers at the bottom of the draft list and take a large part of the draft administration out of McNutt's hands.

However, there is a large possibility that McNutt will be disappointed and that the President will not accept the McNutt veto message or veto the bill at all. In that case, McNutt's friends say, he is almost certain to slide gracefully out of Washington.

Real fact is that McNutt is not so concerned with the father-deferment part of the bill as with congressional meddling with the administrative set-up of his War Manpower Commission by which considerable power is taken away from him and given to General Hershey, Selective Service director.

Entirely aside from this, however, McNutt is fed up with things and would just as soon get out of Washington. Those who know anything about his job realize that it has been an almost impossible one. Probably he has done better than most people, but even so, he is one of the most abused men in Washington.

Therefore close friends say that Paul has been keeping his eyes open for a business connection: first because living on a Government salary has depleted his finances; secondly because, if he remains in the Administration, his hands are tied when it comes to the next Democratic convention.

At the Chicago convention, McNutt believes he could have had the Vice Presidential nomination had he not bowed out as a good Roosevelt soldier. He isn't at all optimistic about Democratic chances next year, but he is even less optimistic about his chances of being Vice Presidential nominee if he is still in the Roosevelt Administration.

On his own, however, and not subject to any FDR loyalty, he might be second man on the ticket That is why you may see one of Washington's most colorful figures gradually ease out of the picture.

Merry-Go-Round

UNITED STATES ALASKAN Judge Simon Hellenthal has come down from the Klondike to see why he hasn't been reappointed to his judgeship. One reason is that he ordered a hunting license to be issued to General Simon Bolivar Buckner, commanding officer in Alaska, when the Interior Department had refused it . . . Watch for the appointment of Tony Diamond, now Alaskan Delegate to Congress, as United States judge in Alaska . . . Chief defenders of General Patton inside the Senate Military Affairs Committee are: Lodge of Massachusetts, Gurney of South Dakota and "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky. Committee Chairman Bob Reynolds of North Carolina is on the fence . . . Index of how the naval balance has changed in the Pacific: When the Japs threatened Midway, not far from Pearl Harbor, we marshalled most of our naval strength and fought them off. But when we headed for the Gilbert Islands, not far from Truk, the Jap navy didn't dare risk battle. Fighting on land was fierce, but the imperial navy is down so low that it can't risk the danger of needing replacements.

HEDDA HOPPER

A Favored Young Man

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 1.—Gertrude Lawrence found him, Metro's got him, Bob Leonard directs him and Hugh Marlowe plays the second lead with Lana Turner in "Marriage Is a Private Affair." They certainly haven't wasted any time. This is Hugh's second picture handed him in two days. Imagine getting Lana Turner and Bob Leonard in your first picture. Boy! If that's not luck! John Hodiak actually gets Lana, but Hugh trails along . . . It delights me to see ZaSu Pitts starring in "Ramshackle Inn" in Boston, with some of the best names in the show business supporting her. We've loved Pitts for years. She's been outstanding. She's made many dull pictures less dull. Her first stage appearance here without any training was in one of Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30" playlets put on for charity. She absolutely enraged its all-star cast. No matter what Pitts did, the audience roared. I only hope this play measures up to Pitts.

LANA TURNER

Builder-Upper

Columbia's "Two Man Submarine" will have Ann Savage and Tom Neal in the leads. They've just completed "Klondike Kate." Tom has been called "The Road Show Clark Gable," but he's beginning to forget the captain and give out with that old Neal personality . . . Samuel Bronston, who put Jack London's life on the screen, is East trying again to get permission to film the life of Brig. Gen. William (Billy) Mitchell . . . As soon as Benny Goodman heard Twentieth was about to do "Kitten on the Keys," he started right in doing a swing version of "My Mother's Eyes" . . . Jose Iturbi loves families. When he takes Betty Asher out to dine, her brother goes, too.

Reunion in Boston

Lieut. Hal Grieve writes from Quonset, R. I., that Ensign Tom Cunningham says he's not fighting the war for Gypsy Rose Lee but for Paulette Goddard and rare roast beef. Margaret Sullavan sent tickets for her show in Boston to Hal and eight pilot pals. They all had dinner and supper after the show with her. Says Hal: "She does a beautiful acting job. A most amusing play with only three people and a million laughs. Sullavan was assembled by Adrian, Hattie Carnegie and Mexican peasants, and her play will probably run till her children graduate from Westlake School for Girls. Henry Fonda's up here in school. I'm running around in circles. I've been doing it so long my gears won't slow down."

Well, Now

Donald O'Connor, whose picture "Top Man" is current, decided to get his own breakfast before pushing off to work. Just as he was drinking his coffee came a knock at the door. There was a tramp asking for a handout. He looked so old and hungry Donald not only took him in but started cooking bacon for him. At this point his mother appeared and said, "I don't mind your giving him breakfast, but bacon is pretty scarce around here." At which the tramp took out his ration book and said, "Madame, I haven't much use for this!"—and whipped off 46 points.

Slight Cave-In

Adolphe Menjou, after five months in Europe and making speeches to help our victory committee since his return, has taken to his bed for a five days' rest on doctor's orders. He took time out to send me a hat which came from Gen. Charles de Gaulle. It was sent by my friend and neighbor, Lieut. Comdr. Jack Carter. . . . Laraine Day, back from camp tours in Florida, had the same old trouble. She wasn't allowed to eat with the enlisted men. When she complained that she didn't come all the way down there to entertain brass hats, I'll be darned if they didn't send in a report about her. Isn't there some way we can straighten out this difficulty? This isn't the first time I've heard the complaint, and you've got to be a pretty big star to cope with it. And you shouldn't have to. It should all be taken care of before you leave on your tour.

Joking Aside

Fun's fun, but just why should Bing Crosby attend a preview of Swoonatra's first epic, "Higher and Higher?" If Swoonatra's wise, he won't go either. . . . It's Phil Baker's description of a tired star: "She wears pancake makeup on, but has a waffle complexion off." . . . The Duncan sisters' new song is "Bifocal Built for Two." . . . Paul Stewart, Cary Grant's gangster pal in "Mr. Lucky," went coy on Olivia de Havilland in "Government Girl." . . . Has Edward G. Robinson, "King of Gangsters," gone soft on us? The answer is yes. In his last five pictures there wasn't a trace of a mug. In his next, "Mr. Winkle Goes to War," he plays a milquetoast sort of character, and in "Once Off Guard," which is set for 1944, he'll be a professor of English literature. Shades of little Caesar! How he must haunt himself in his dreams! . . . Smiley Burdette is telling friends of his livestock business. Other day, he bought a pig for $40—swapped it in for a lamb, traded the lamb for a crate of chickens, traded the chickens for a rabbit hutch, swapped the rabbit hutch for a calf, and then sold the calf to Cookie Fairchild for $40. "Didn't make any profit," says Smiley, "but, boy, what fun!"

Poll Tax Foes Postpone Fight To Expedite Vital Legislation

Senate backers of the anti-poll-tax bill at a strategy conference yesterday decided to postpone their fight to kill poll taxes as a prerequisite for voting in special elections until after the Christmas recess.

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, spokesman for the group, said sponsors of the legislation had no intention of interfering with pending tax, subsidy, soldier vote and other war legislation by demanding an immediate showdown.

A strong group of Southern Senators has laid plans to talk the bill to death once it is called up. Van Nuys denied backers of the legislation have been intimidated by filibuster threats, but said "the people won't stand for interference with vital war measures."

The Indiana chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which favorably reported the anti-poll-tax bill, said it was decided at yesterday's conference to call up the bill shortly after the turn of the year and press the fight to a vote.

He said it was improbable any other important business will be pending before the Senate at the time. Van Nuys will make the motion to call up the bill.

Southern opponents of the legislation meanwhile replied bitterly to demands Tuesday by the Nation's top labor leaders that the Senate crush the imminent filibuster by adopting the cloture rule.

"These labor leaders had better attend to their own damned business instead of poking their noses into constitutional matters," said Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana. "The time may come when these same labor leaders will be exhorting Senators to filibuster against repeal of legislation enacted for their benefit."

Champion Steer Brings $4000

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—T. O. Monogram, grand champion steer of the Chicago market fat stock show, was sold today to the Food Fair Stores, Philadelphia, Pa., for $4 a pound, third highest price ever paid for a champion since the annual International Livestock Exposition opened in 1900.

T. Richard Lacy, 17-year-old Kansas, Ill., youth who showed the 1020-pound Hereford, pocketed the animal's sale price of more than $4000, to bring his earnings in four years of showing to $25,000. He also showed last year's grand champion steer. Young Lacy's 1942 grand champion sold for $1 a pound.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Dec. 1.—Without lifting a finger or even appearing in the council halls, Judge Landis put down a rebellion of the minor leagues today, and his good friend, William G. Bramham, continues as boss of the minors.

POVICH

Landis was on Bramham's side in the revolt of the top minor leagues aimed at installing Frank J. Shaughnessy, International League boss, as president of the minors. Landis was on Bramham's side because the Shaughnessy group wanted to put an end to the major-minor agreement under which Landis is a one-man court of appeals in all minor league transactions.

Bramham, in his hour of peril before the minors were to vote on continuing him in office, went into a huddle with Landis, and saved his job with the Landis technique of interpreting the rules to serve his own end. That's an old Landis device, handing down a rule without apology or explanation, and making it stick. Unquestionably Landis showed Bramham the way out of his difficulty.

The top minors were prepared to shoot the works in the meeting this morning to elect a new minor league commissioner. They were seizing what they thought was their big chance. Nineteen minor leagues did not operate last year. Among the nine which did, they were able to marshal six votes against the three of the Bramham supporters.

Earlier in the year, Bramham had ruled that the 19 inoperative leagues had forfeited their right to vote. But now he needed their votes and he told them, "Gentlemen, I have changed my mind; the inoperative leagues did not lose their right to vote." That maneuver smacked completely of Landis. Bramham called for a vote on his candidacy and won hands down with the suspended leagues, whose side he had taken, voting for him. The canny maneuver of Bramham received due compliment by John Steigelmeier, president of the Buffalo club, who was one of the beaten insurgents. Rising to his feet after the election, Steigelmeier declared: "I want to congratulate Judge Bramham on the manner in which he has conducted this meeting on behalf of his votes."

Baseball politics is pretty dull reading—and writing, for that matter. The customer doesn't give a hoot about them. But in this case it was a notable victory for Landis. Actually the rebellion went farther than a mere move to unseat Bramham and install the more dynamic Shaughnessy. The whole business was aimed at Landis.

The owners of the big farm systems, the Yankees, the Cardinals, the Dodgers and the Browns have been annoyed for several years by the close scrutiny Landis has applied to their transactions. He broke up their habit of making "cover-up" deals and shuffling talent around with ostensible trades in which the ball players got the dirty end and were retarded from progression to the majors.

George Weiss, manager of the Yankees, farm system; Branch Rickey, of the Dodgers, and George DeWitt, of the Browns, with the control of numerous minor league clubs, inspired the revolt against Bramham which was tantamount to a rebellion against Landis. They were trying to work through their minor league holdings the same jobs which Landis had constantly rebuffed in the big-league meetings.

When Bramham announced that he was permitting the inoperative minors to cast a vote both in the election of the minor league commissioner and the renewal of the major-minor pact, he left the rebelling group with only one recourse, an appeal to Landis. The rebels won't even bother to take it to Landis. They know how he stands and how he would vote. Bramham was saying, in effect, "Gentlemen, I consider myself elected and the matter closed."

At one point before Bramham announced he was now reinterpreting the rules to permit the suspended leagues to vote, their appointed representative introduced the ugly word "Federal court" into the meeting. He declared that unless they were permitted to vote, they would take their case to the courts, a threat that Bramham held over the heads of the rebels. Baseball men, knowing their player contracts won't be approved by any court, shudder at the idea of a legal battle.

Landis, as a result of his firm hand in the banishment for life of baseball-betting William Cox, owner of the Phillies, is even more solidly entrenched than usual in his own job as commissioner. The top minors were picking the worst possible time to aim any kind of a blow at the judge, particularly such a thinly disguised attempt as the effort to strike at him by unseating his good pal, Bramham.

Baseball men now look for Landis, who is in a fighting mood, to crack down on certain club owners. The judge is scanning with some foreboding the reserve lists of several of the minor league teams with major-league connections. The Toledo club, owned by the Browns, has, for instance, a reserve list of nearly 250 players, bought cheaply from defunct minor leagues. Toledo holds title to the players despite the fact they are in the service, and Landis doesn't like teams to be loading up that way. The chances are he will find some violation of the rules and declare all such players free agents.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 1.—Sportswriters who used to compare Tommy Harmon's gridiron shiftiness to that of a cat were telling an enduring truth. He's hardly begun to expend his lives, what with having seven left.

CONSIDINE

Harmon certainly will never suffer from one of the more touching occupational diseases of ex-All Americas. That disease is the let-down of post-college life. In peace times, college-stars-turned-bond-salesmen were one of the great menaces facing the alumni front. As their names got farther and farther away from the current sports pages the frosted doors of rich prospects became harder to crack—the same rich prospects who wanted to adopt them when the boys were scoring touchdowns.

Tommy spun the football world on its ear, but when he left school his chances of ever reaching a peak of popularity again were 1000 to 1. Yet, as it turned out, nothing he ever did in college can approach his two miraculous returns from almost certain death.

Patton stories numbers 21,937 and 21,938:

Before going overseas, the fiery general commanded one of the most rugged maneuvers the Army ever had. Knowing that his men needed hard campaigning under their belts before the real McCoy, he drove them night and day until the nerves of many were ragged and raw.

Near the end of the maneuvers, Patton was whizzing down a road in a jeep when he suddenly spotted a young fellow, ostensibly a Signal Corps man, repairing a telephone line. The general stopped the jeep, got out and barked up the telephone pole to the boy, ordering him to come down immediately.

"Go wan, I'm busy," the guy called back down. The general went slightly apoplectic and repeated the order with emphasis. The fellow shrugged and climbed down. He didn't even salute. His khaki trousers were baggy at the knees and his shirt was dirty. He wasn't even wearing his necktie, another unspeakable breach of military etiquette. The general was naturally indignant beyond words, for there were many witnesses. He roared:

"Young man, give me your name and the number of your outfit."

The kid scratched his head, bewildered.

"What the heck's going on here? I'm Gus Blow of the Bell Telephone Company."

The other Patton story comes from Joseph J. Leray, New York's director of transportation and ambulance services. Leray, former featherweight champion of our World War I Tank Corps, served under Patton in France. Patton was then a lieutenant colonel and our foremost authority on tanks.

"Patton's the greatest field leader in our Army," Leray told us. "The man hasn't got an ounce of fear in him. He was right in the thick of every battle we fought in the other war, and any old Patton man will swear by him. He's out to win this war as quickly as possible. I wish we had more like him.

"Sure he's tough. He's got to be. He drives himself harder than he ever drives any of his men. He gave me a friendly slap on the back once, after I came out of a hospital in France, and it darn near knocked me down. That's the way he is. We would have gone through fire for him.

"Patton's the greatest field leader in our Army," Leray told us. "The critics give him a breather by taking his place for a few days! I think it's a crime to kick him around when we ought to be concentrating completely on kicking the enemy around.

"I'll bet my last nickel that one part of the story out of Algiers was wrong. I mean the part where the medical officer is supposed to have taken the general's gun away from him. Boy! I'd like to see anybody—anybody—even think of trying to do that."

Six Duke Stars Gain All-Southern Eleven

By Barton Pattie

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—Pat Preston, Duke University's towering tackle, was the outstanding football player in the Southern Conference in the opinion of the coaches and sports editors whose votes selected the loop's all-star team for 1943.

Leading all other candidates in the balloting, Preston, whose 205 pounds are spread over a 6-foot-2 frame, fell just one vote short of being a unanimous choice for the tackle berth. He was one of two repeaters on the All-Conference eleven, Tom Davis, Duke back, being the other. Preston, whose home is at Thomasville, N. C., was named to the 1942 team while at Wake Forest and went to Duke as a Marine trainee this year.

Duke's conference champions dominated the voting, winning six positions on the honor squad. The University of North Carolina, beaten twice by the Blue Devils during the season, landed three men on the all-star aggregation and Wake Forest won the two remaining places.

Selections of Stars

The All-Conference team:

Ends—Ben Cittadino, Duke and Ray Poole, North Carolina.

Tackles—Pat Preston, Duke and John Maskas, North Carolina.

Center—Bill Starford, Wake Forest.

Backs—Nick Sacrinty, Wake Forest; Buddy Luper, Duke; Tom Davis, Duke and Hosea Rodgers, North Carolina.

War Aids Two Squads

The war made six of the All-Conference stars available to Duke and North Carolina this year. Maskas' alma mater was Virginia Tech, Jamie Myers was a marine transfer from the University of Tennessee, Milner played for the University of South Carolina a year ago, Ray Poole was one of three former University of Mississippi Pooles on the North Carolina squad, and Rodgers was shifted to North Carolina's V-12 program from the University of Alabama.

Duke also captured the most second team berths, placing Fletcher Wall at center, Jim Copley on an end and Blount and Long in the backfield of that reserve eleven. North Carolina furnished Barney Poole on the other end, Ralph Strayhorn at guard, and Teague in the backfield. South Carolina was represented by Ernie Bauer at guard and Dom Fusci at tackle. Richmond scored with Marvin Bass at tackle and Freeman at quarterback. Bass and Freeman were both members of William and Mary's 1942 conference champions.

Bivins Gets Booed Nod Over Murray

Cleveland, Dec. 1 (AP).—Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland Negro, ranked by the National Boxing Association as the country's top active heavyweight, was awarded a thunderously booed 10-round decision over Lee Q. Murray of South Norwalk, Conn., here tonight. Bivins weighed 187¼ pounds to an even 200 for Murray.

Claudio Villar, 200, formerly of Spain but now fighting out of Washington, D. C., was the victim of a technical kayo by Pfc. Joey Maxim, 182, in 2:05 of the sixth round in the scheduled 10 round semifinal. Villar's face was a mass of blood when the bout was stopped with the Spaniard on the deck.

18.4% Drop Recorded in Grid Crowds

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Football attendance during the season just closed suffered a drop of 18.4 per cent compared to 1942, a survey of 57 major schools discloses.

The decline was greatest in the South, where a drop of 28.4 per cent was reported, and the least in the East, 6.4 per cent.

The national falling-off almost duplicated the decline suffered last seaosn over the attendance of 1941, which was an even 19 per cent.

Dropped About One-Third

Thus in the two seasons since Pearl Harbor attendance at football games has dropped approximately a third.

West Coast crowds, which sloughed off approximately 30 per cent during the season a year ago, dropped only 6.8 per cent this fall.

Despite the general setback there were isolated cases of increases. Michigan, whose Navy-laden squad barged its way into a tie for the Big Ten championship, had an aggregate of 230,000 persons at six home games this year. Last season only 206,135 spectators saw seven games.

Much of the Wolverine increase was due to the Notre Dame game when 86,000 fans—the largest of the year—attended. Pennsylvania, with crowds of 72,000 for the struggle with Navy and 30,000 for Army, also showed an increase but played one more game at home this fall.

Navy, with its Eastern championship eleven, came up with a terrific increase, the Middies playing to 182,332 fans in five games at home this fall far surpassed the aggregate of 104,000 who bought tickets for six frays a year ago.

Differences in Teams

While some of the drop can be attributed to the rationing of gasoline and other travel hinderances, some of it also is due to the differences in teams which represented the institutions in the two years under comparison.

The 1942 Georgia eleven was good enough to be chosen for the Rose Bowl and had a total home crowd of 106,000 for four games. This year the Bulldogs were represented by an all-civilian team that won only five of its nine games. The attendance was 31,992 for the six tilts played at Athens.

The average game-attendance by sections:

Section.	1942	1943	Decline.	Pct.
Midwest	21,870	17,222	4,648	21.2
Southwest	10,348	8,164	2,184	21.1
Pacific Coast	20,422	19,032	1,390	6.8
South	14,763	10,564	4,199	28.4
East	18,205	17,036	1,169	6.4

Spears' Team Tests Redskins On Giant Plays

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Maryland University Football Coach Dr. Clarence Spears took 11 Redskins under his wing last night, fed them New York Giant plays under the Griffith Stadium lights and ran them against Coach Dutch Bergman's first stringers in the 'Skins longest practice session in several weeks.

Spears, assisted by Vince McNally, his scouting partner from Georgetown, had the backfield of George Cafego, Leo Stasica, Frank Akins and Joe Gibson imitating the Giants' backs as best they could with the short time to digest the information at hand.

Stasica was running after the fashion of Bill Paschal, the rookie back with 10 touchdowns to his credit, and Ward Cuff, the veteran enjoying one of his best years as a ball carrier, while Cafego took over when Spears wanted a passing play as from Tuffy Leemans or Emory Nix.

Means Much to Team

Leemans, in his eighth year of pro ball but third in seniority with the Giants (Mel Hein has played 13 years and Leland Shaffer nine), means as much to the Giants as any single player does to any team in the league. Tuffy plays on offense but he provides the spark. His passing record for the year is not bad, with 34 completions in 80 attempts, five for touchdowns. Nix has completed 21 in 46 tries.

The Redskins practiced yesterday without Dick Farman and Steve Slivinski, the unbeatable guard team. Farman is definitely out of both New York games while Slivinski was given permission to take Tuesday off, but his absence yesterday was a mystery. Mrs. Slivinski is in the hospital at Seattle.

Reports of all officers and committee chairman will precede the election. A luncheon at noon will follow the election and installation of officers, which is only a formality, following the report of the nominating committee.

Marine Five Scores Over YMCA, 55 to 40

Eagle Cagers Start, Tackle Bridgewater

A curtailed college basketball season, which finds Georgetown and George Washington out of the picture but Maryland and Catholic Universities with 20-game schedules and Gallaudet and American U. with 18, officially opens tonight wit hthe American U. Eagles host to Bridgewater College.

Clarence Sheffer, an outstanding football player at Southern California who coached freshman basketball at the University of Arizona and at Riverside and Hancock Junior Colleges in California, is the new A. U. coach, while at Catholic U. Johnny Long, an alumnus, takes over the reigns. Burt Shipley is back at Maryland and English Sullivan at Gallaudet.

C. U. Plays Tomorrow

American opens only a day ahead of rival Mason-Dixon Conference schools as Catholic University entertains Fort Belvoir tomorrow night and Bridgewater remains over to play Gallaudet at Roosevelt High School. Maryland waits until December 11, a week from Saturday, to open with Quantico at College Park.

Sheffer has only one 1942 holdover at American U. in Bob Miller, who played in support of the Eagles' high-scoring duo of Bart Bugler and George Zuras last year. Miller will start at guard with Robert Guy, playing the first basketball in his life, as in Bruce Drake, at forward. Henry Latimer, the other starting forward, played with Bethesda last year and Ralph Yow, 6-foot-5 center, played high school basketball on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

The Mason-Dixon Conference has granted schools with Naval students permission to use them in

Minors Lose Fight to Oust Bramham

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The revolution against the control of Kenesaw M. Landis and William G. Bramham over minor league baseball collapsed today in a bitter brawl that brought roars of illegality and threats to take the entire minor league setup into the courts.

And when the smoke cleared away, Landis still was the head man in power and Bramham was reelected president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues for five more years at $25,000 annually.

The two remained right in the driver's seats, although it took some fast "footwork" by Bramham in his handling of the national association meeting to remain there.

Highlight of Meeting

The explosion on the floor of the convention and the resultant reelection of Bramham and renewal for one year of the major-minor league agreement, by which Landis wields the big stick over the minors, was by far the hottest action of the week-long winter baseball meetings to date.

Although the attempted rebellion was broken up at the National Association convention, the five insurgent leagues flatly declared they weren't "going to take this laying down." As a result, they went into an immediate executive session and it was learned they would appeal the crucial tussle over voting privileges of 16 suspended leagues directly to Landis tonight.

A committee representing the insurrectionists took the squabble to Landis immediately and conferred for several hours with him. The high commissioner said "no decision will be made tonight, but we'll definitely finish it up tomorrow."

Lid Is Blown Off

For Landis to take jurisdiction in the battle, the case would have to be based on the ground that conduct detrimental to baseball was involved. And the insurrectionists were prepared to claim just that.

The lid was blown off in the National Association get together by the rebellion aimed at ending Landis' control over the minors. This was sponsored by the three powerful double-A loops—the International, Pacific Coast and American Association—and the the Piedmont and Pony circuits.

But Bramham gave back to 16 suspended leagues the ballot he and the nine operating loops took away from them a few months ago for failure to operate in 1943.

By doing this—he explained he was reversing his stand because he had discovered a section in the National Association agreement he never knew existed—Bramham saved the day, for all these loops voted in his favor.

Capt. Lester White, Ex-Army Grid Star, Killed in Action

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP).—Capt. Lester White, 26, former Army halfback and an Army Air Corps flight commander, was killed overseas November 22, his wife, Mrs. Mary Louise Ountz White, was notified by the War Department today.

The Whites were married at Camp Holabird, Md., last year.

Captain White, who played on the Army grid team in 1938-1939, graduated from West Point in 1941. A native of Columbia, Mo., he played football at the University of Missouri before going to West Point.

World Series Films Fly to Battle Areas

New York, Dec. 1(AP).—The World Series was stowed away today on an Army transport plane at LaGuardia Field. Destination: battle areas overseas.

Pennock Signs As Phillies' Gen'l Manager

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Herb Pennock, onetime ace left-hand pitcher and more recently head of the Boston Red Sox farm system, today signed a five-year contract as general manager of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Announcement of Pennock's signing, after two days of conferences, was made by Robert Carpenter, jr., new president of the Phils.

In Full Charge

"Herb will be in charge of the operation of the entire ball club," Carpenter said. "That includes the club itself, the farm system we hope to develop and the scouting staff. He is the boss. I expect to be in the Army soon, and when I go, Herb will operate the Phillies himself."

In going to the Phillies, Pennock, who pitched for the Red Sox, the New York Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics in his playing days, severs a nine-year run with the Boston club. He came to the Red Sox in 1934 as a coach, later became a scout and, two years ago, succeeded Billy Evans as head of the farm system.

Pennock's designation had the approval of Tom Yawkey, millionaire owner of the Red Sox, who previously had said, "I would not stand in his way."

Fred Fitzsimmons will continue as field manager.

Childhood Friends

Pennock and Carpenter have been friends since Carpenter's childhood. The 28-year-old Phillies' president lives in Wilmington, Del., and Pennock in Kennett Square, Pa., close by. They often hunt together and Pennock once took Carpenter on a baseball tour with the New York Yankees.

Carpenter created the position of general manager partly because he has been summond for induction into the armed forces in January.

Weathermen Edge Gallaudet, 51 to 49

Coming from behind after trailing 21-6 after the first quarter, Weather Division Headquarters, AAF, quint last night defeated Gallaudet College, 51-49, in a practice game at Gallaudet gym. Lieutenant Doyel, with 20 points, starred for the Weathermen, while Holcomb lead the Blues with 14.

Cawthon Remains As Dodger Coach

Brooklyn, Dec. 1 (AP).—Pete Cawthon will be retained as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Football League, Club President Jack Davies said today.

Davies added that the club's poor showing during the 1943 campaign, when it won only two games, was not Cawthon's fault because "he wasn't called in until July."

Bagby, Heath, Peters Eyed By Nat Boss

By Shirley Povich

New York, Dec. 1.—Clark Griffith, in his bid to acquire an infielder at the major league trading sessions today, revealed that he did not come to New York empty-handed. He is putting Outfielder Bob Johnson and Pitcher Buck Newsom on the block.

Manager Ossie Bluege is not averse to parting with Johnson in any trade that would bring the Nats an infielder, and in that direction he was bargaining today with Manager Lou Boudreau of the Indians. Bluege has Griffith's permission also to include Newsom in any deal he likes.

From Cleveland, Bluege is seeking Infielder Russ Peters and he is playing on the Indians' need of outfielders by dangling Johnson before them. Boudreau would also like to trade Jeff Heath, his temperamental outfielder, and any deal, if made, might burgeon as a six-player transaction with Bluege willing to accept Heath, Peters and Pitcher Jim Bagby in exchange for Johnson, Newsom and another player.

Kampouris May Go

It is known also that Bluege is not keen to retain his utility second baseman, Alex Kampouris, and would not hold out strongly in any deal that would involve him.

Both Bluege and Griffith were considerably miffed by Johnson's failure to prove of value to the club in the last half of last season, although giving him due credit for his work in the earlier months. And they were not considerably impressed with Newsom's pitching after buying him from the Browns.

Later tonight, the Nats' bosses were in session with the Yankees in an attempt to pry loose from them Shortstop George Stirnweiss. They have abandoned hope they might acquire Frankie Crosetti, who replaced Stirnweiss as a Yankee regular last June. Second base is Stirnweiss' natural position and with Gerry Priddy Army bound, Bluege is eager for second base protection.

Interested in Johnson

Manager Joe McCarthy has steadfastly expressed complete indifference to any trade that would bring the voluble Newsom to the Yankees, but he is supposedly interested in Johnson. The Yankees' Charley Keller has been classified 1-A in the draft and McCarthy is resigned to his loss from the outfield.

Bluege was discussing trade also with the Tigers who have expressed an interest in Johnson, but they won't give up Frank Overmire, the chunky left-handed pitcher whom Bluege wants. The Nats' manager is still haggling with the Tigers in an attempt to obtain Infielder Joe Orengo in some sort of a deal. Bluege likes Orengo's versatility at all infield positions. He was sent to Indianapolis by the Giants last season and drafted by Detroit.

Griffith Granted Unlimited Night Ball

New York, Dec. 1.—Big league baseball in Washington next season will be played only at night after May 5, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, it was announced today.

Clark Griffith received from the two big leagues permission to stage an unlimited number of night games after the May 5 date.

Thus approximately 50 of the Nats home games will be staged under the lights, Griffith said. "I may, however, schedule some games for Saturday afternoon if the public likes them, or introduce twilight games if they prove popular," he added.

Other clubs in the league were restricted to a total of 14 night games at home.

The two loops were separated by two weeks on a schedule for next year. The National League approved a tentative season to start April 18 and close October 1, but the junior circuit magnates proposed that the campaign open a week later and close a week earlier, with the elimination of open dates making up the difference.

Both leagues were in favor of a program of games for war relief, possibly similar to the 1942 and '43 schedule when every team in both loops played one home game for the war effort.

Grey Days Pays $17.80 at Charles Town

Stretch Run Is Too Much For Dividend

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 1.—Racing for the first time over this track, H. H. Fausett's Grey Days, shipped here from Sportsman's Park, showed a liking for the 6-furlong oval and won in approved stretch-away fashion in the fifth race, the day's best offering. The colt of Halcyon, one time C. V. Whitney star, developed a stretch drive that proved too much for Dividend, owned by C. P. Sowers of Washington and installed the favorite in the field of eight going 6½ furlongs. Third money went to Mrs. J. M. Welch's Attune.

Grey Days, in winning by three parts of a length, hung up a $17.80 mutuel to break a string of successes for favorites and near-favorites. Ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk, Grey Days was clocked in 1:20 1-5 over a fast track and performed before a crowd of 4000. Spring-like weather prevailed.

Dividend, with Jockey F. Sheaffer aboard, was hustled to the front on the outside going to the clubhouse turn. Attune, in second position, moved up menacingly on the backstretch but began to fade at the far turn. Grey Days then moved up gradually on the outside of Dividend, and disposed of the public choice in the final eighth.

One of the closest finishes of the meeting came in the first race with two of the three Kirk brothers kicking and booting their mounts right into the wire. D. H. Tabler's Chat Hopkins, ridden by little Ralph Kirk, hung a nose defeat on W. M. Beougher's Royal Echo, piloted by brother Carson. Chat Hopkins paid $12 and paved the way for a $15.80 daily double payoff on 320 tickets.

Dr. H. B. Langdon's locally owned Cornelia Jane won the second event, paying a mere $2.80 to win.

NOTES—Ten jockeys have moved in and the total is now 60. Jockey Danny Scocca's horses failed to get off the "also eligible" list today and he took an afternoon off. Stanley Greene, jr., is developing into a top trainer. He has saddled 41 winners this year. His brother, Marvin, is a seaman in the mounted patrol of the Coast Guard at Miami. Horses, little known hereabouts, began winning today and mutuel pay-offs soared. Post time will be 1:30 p. m. until further notice. Speed to Spare, at 10 years old, still earns his hay. He has been one of the most popular sprinters of all time.

Redskins Given Giant Formations

Wash., and it was thought he might have been called home on a moment's notice.

Bob Masterson, who works all week to get his bum leg in shape but has to start all over again on Mondays after a bruising ball game, hobbled around the stadium, a doubtful starter against the Giants. Trainer Wilbur Bohm continued treatments to Willie Wilkin's knee, but Willie took his place with the first-string line.

Meanwhile, in New York, Stout Steve Owen, whose coaching job on a makeshift bunch of pro gridders has been termed the best in the league, played a psychological trick on the Giants by running movies of the 1941 game in New York, the year the Giants stopped Sammy Baugh and beat the Redskins, 20 to 13.

Since the Redskins moved to Washington the Giants have won 7 of 12 games, lost 4 and tied 1. Baugh has completed 78 touchdown passes in seven years with the Redskins, but only 4 of them have been against the Giants.

Owen, however, has no idea of playing Sunday's game, which the Giants must win to remain in contention for the Eastern title, on clippings. He has been stressing pass defense, the Giants' weakest department to date. The Giants hit a new low on pass defense in the Bear game. Brooklyn completed 10 passes last Sunday, several of them to Bruiser Kinard, playing his first pro game at end.

Newspapermen at yesterday's practice quickly turned the conversation to ask Bergman when the Redskins would leave for Chicago and the championship game December 19. "We'll leave on (pause), who said that, leave for Chicago, we might not even get to Chicago, don't mention the Bears around here until we beat the Giants," Dutch fumed.

Pair of Sixes Added to Ring Card Monday

Two six-round bouts have been added to Matchmaker Gabe Menendez' first fight card at Turner's Arena Monday night featuring the heavyweight 10-round scrap between Lee Oma, New York "Glamour Boy," and Georgie Parks, local Negro.

One of the six, a heavyweight affair, will bring together Walter Hafer, fighting Marine, and Jimmy Bell, another local hope. The other will send two more local boys, Jimmy Sloan and Charlie Matthews, into action.

The six-round semifinal is a return bout in which Eddie Kane, local boy, will meet Charlie Bennett, of Baltimore. Kane, winner of 15 of 16 bouts as a pro lost his only decision to the Monumental City Negro in the feature match of a ball park card last summer.

Oma, training daily at Stillman's gym, New York, where sparring partners are plentiful, has lost but one match in his career, that to Buddy Walker, whom he subsequently defeated in a return go. He is expected to arrive Sunday, but Matchmaker Menendez stated yesterday he would make every effort to have the "Glamour Boy" on hand Saturday in time for a public workout.

Masked Grapplers To Doff Covers for Tonight's Matches

There were some startling developments at Turner's Arena yesterday, as Promoter Joe Turner issued a communique to the effect that the Blue Streak, who meets the Original Angel, Maurice Tillet, tonight at Turner's Arena, will wrestle minus his mask.

The Blue Streak, Turner stated, will unveil himself as none other than the one-time Washington Auditorium favorite, Billy Bartush of Chicago.

Turner also announced that Barto Hill better known as the Yellow Mask, will oppose Maurice LaChappelle, the Flying Frenchman, without his mask. But the Black Mask will not remove his lid in his semiwindup battle against George Macricostas.

All of this should be interesting for a delegation from Capitol Hill, which will attend the show as the guests of Promoter Turner, some of them viewing hostilities for the first time. It is this same delegation which last week had been asked to consider a bill to put wrestling under the Boxing Commission supervision.

In supporting 30-minute matches, first at 8:45, Henry Brunfield will oppose Frank Brunowicz, and Jimmy Britt will tackle Lloyd Mathis.

Passes Top Scoring Weapon in Pro Loop

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Although it's fairly well established that this is the age power, the National Football League has further evidence to submit, namely:

For the first time in the loop's history, more touchdowns have been scored via passes than on the ground.

With four teams having completed their 10-game schedules and the other four almost finished, figures today showed that aerials have accounted for 106 touchdowns while rushes have netted 95 in all league games.

Passes More Popular

George Strickler, league publicist, who said rushes always produced more scores in the past, ascribed the turn-about to growing popularity and more frequent use of passes, together with an increase of approximately six in the average number of plays per game.

Responsibility for the increase in plays, he added, is that an average of two more penalties are being called each game and two more passes are falling incomplete, thus allowing additional actual playing time. On the average, league contests now provide a total of about 180 plays, including kick-offs and punts. Strickler attributed the rise in penalties of 10 yards per game to sharper officiating.

Passing artists such as the Chicago Bears' Sid Luckman, Sammy Baugh of Washington, Leroy Zimmerman of Phil-Pitt, Tony Canadeo and Irv Comp of Green Bay, have helped build an average gain of 6.3 yards for every pass completed in the league. Average rushing gain is 3.3 yards.

Eagles Replace Bears

Luckman has had a mighty hand in establishing the Bears' new loop record of 404.5 yards gained per game. The previous league record of 388 yards was set by the Bears in 1939. This week's runner-up offensively is Green Bay with 341.5 yards.

The Packers, who meet Phil-Pitt Sunday in the season's finale for both, also run second to the Bears in passing with 200.7 yards net per game, compared with the Western Division champions' 239.4.

In upsetting the Redskins last Sunday and endangering their Eastern Division title hopes, Phil-Pitt also displaced the Bears as rushing leader. The Eagles boast a 176-5-yard gain per game compared with the Bears' 161.1.

Washington, though whipped, 27 to 14, completed 14 of 18 passes, maintaining its leadership in aerial proficiency with a completion mark of .533. The Redskins also clung to top defensive honors, having yielded 223.5 yards a game while Phil-Pitt replaced the Bears as runner-up with a 224-8 mark.

The team leaders:

Total yards gained per game—Chicago Bears, 404.5; Green Bay, 341.5.

Yards rushing per game—Phil-Pitt, 176.5; Chicago Bears, 161.1.

Yards passing per game—Chicago Bears, 239.4; Green Bay, 200.7.

Per cent of passes completed—Washington, .533; Chicago Bears, .511.

Opponents' yards per game—Washington, 223.5; Phil-Pitt, 224.8.

Opponents' yards by rushing per game—Phil-Pitt, 68.7; Green Bay, 107.8.

Opponents' yards by passing per game—Chicago Bears, 98; Washington, 115.

Punting average—Washington, 43.8; Detroit Lions, 41.5.

A's Will Train At Frederick

Frederick, Md., Dec. 1.—The Philadelphia Athletics will do their spring training in Frederick next season, according to announcement today by R. B. Wolfe, president of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Earle Mack, coach of the Athletics and son of Connie Mack, veteran manager of the Philadelphia club, inspected the McCurdy Field several weeks ago.

Wolfe said there is also a possibility that the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, a "farm" of the Athletics, will also train here on the local high school field.

Change in 'T' Coupon Aimed At Violators

Revamping the gasoline distribution system in an attempt to halt gasoline bootlegging, the Office of Price Administration will put into effect January 1 a new series of serialized ration coupons, it was learned yesterday.

The new gas tickets, it was said, will be issued to holders of the old-type "T" coupons—taxi drivers and truck and bus operators.

The serially-numbered coupons are designed, it was said, to combat the blackmarket traffic in commercial motor vehicle gasoline, which private auto owners are known to have taken advantage of in obtaining "extra" gas.

The new coupons will be issued in strips for each quarter of the year, it was said, and their covers will show the comprehensive serial numbers.

In this way, a gas station operator will be able to check the numbers of the coupons he receives with the numbers on the cover at the time of sale.

The new method, it was said, will make the use of counterfeit coupons almost impossible and will enable local war price and rationing boards to issue the exact number necessary and cut down on paper work.

Blackmarket gas station dealers will be unable to substitute commercial coupons for passenger car rations as they have done with the T coupons, it was said.

A spokesman said the OPA will also put the new system into effect for passenger cars by spring.

WSA Halts Disease Test For Seamen

The War Shipping Administration's order requiring "signing-on" medical examinations for all merchant seamen will be held up at least two weeks, it was learned yesterday.

The WSA medical program, which was to go into effect yesterday, will be amended, it was disclosed, as a result of a closed meeting between maritime union representatives and WSA officials Tuesday.

Warfare between the WSA and the Seafarers International Union of San Francisco, Calif., broke into the open Monday, when Capt. Edward Macauley, deputy WSA administrator made public a letter from Harry Lundeberg, the AFL seaman's union leader, in which Lundeberg said his union would "absolutely and definitely not cooperate" in WSA's plan to examine medically all merchant seamen shipping out to sea.

At Tuesday's meeting, however, spokesmen for all the unions represented were anxious for some kind of medical exam, and it is believed a program will be worked out at a meeting of the union men and ship operators two weeks hence.

The Seafarers Washington representative "showed a cooperative spirit," it was said, and agreed with the others that a program for weeding out tubercular and venereal disease cases was essential.

Charges by Lundeberg, a burly and salty Norway-born seaman, that the WSA program would discriminate against and eliminate the "old sea dogs" from the industry, were "discussed frankly," a spokesman said.

Planning for the WSA medical exams will go ahead, the spokesman said.

Captain Macauley has said that the WSA, in the event of a strike, is ready to sail the ships and call upon the Army and Navy, if necessary, to prevent a tie-up in the movement of supplies and troops to overseas war theaters.

The WSA program, which Lundeberg said was a "medical scheme" worked out by a "bunch of $10,000-a-year stiffs," is designed by WSA to eliminate merchant sailors with contagious diseases as a protection for other crewmen, food-handlers aboard ships and troops in transport.

Dr. Manuel Blanco, Assistant Minister of Health of Costa Rico, arrived in Arlington County yesterday and will spend a week observing public health activities in the county, according to Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, county health officer.

Justice Dept. 'Arrangement' With FCC Hit

The legality of an alleged "arrangement" between the FCC and the Justice Department to give two former FCC employes an opportunity to test the constitutionality of the congressional rider ordering their discharge was sharply challenged yesterday by the Lea Committee investigating the FCC.

The two employes, who were retained by the FCC for a week without pay after November 15 when Congress ordered that their salaries be discontinued, are Dr. Goodwin B. Watson and William E. Dodd, jr.

With Dr. Robert Morss Lovett, former Secretary of the Virgin Islands, now executive assistant to Gov. Charles Harwood of the islands, the two men were the center of a bitter Administration vs. Congress fight last summer, which held up the pay of thousands of Federal and District workers until a rider stopping the pay of the three was adopted as part of the second deficiency bill.

The three men had been declared to hold "subversive" views by the Kerr Committee, a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee which had been formed to investigate long-standing Dies Committee charges against a larger number of Federal employes.

FCC Commissioner T. A. M. Craven and Counsel Charles R. Denny jr., told the committee that the two FCC employes had been allowed to remain at their desks from November 15 to November 21, one week after Congress had ordered they be discharged unless they were appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Both were agreed that the purpose was to give the two men an opportunity to sue the United States Government for their salaries in the Court of Claims, in the hope that eventually the United States Supreme Court would have an opportunity to rule on whether Congress had a constitutional right to order the discharge of specific administrative employes.

Craven said he understood that there had been an arrangement with the Department of Justice to in the absence of a judicial ruling expedite the case.

Asked if the FCC did not itself violate the law forbidding the Government to accept gratuitous services (the reason for the $1 payment for $1 a year man) in permitting the men to remain at their desks after their salary had been legally stopped, Craven said he had been advised it did not.

Denny said that when the FCC decided on its plan of action, which he admitted he outlined, that the matter of gratuitous services had been considered, but as the FCC was willing to pay the men if the court action was favorable he did not believe the statute was violated.

Although Denny admitted that to the contrary an act of Congress is presumed to be legal, he said that he believed the FCC took the proper course of action.

Craven said that although he had "felt for a long time that Congress had been correct in respect to Watson," he had not disapproved the method used to present his case and that of Dodd before the courts. He said he was willing to give the two an opportunity to test the constitutionality of the law, although he had felt that the FCC should not have fought against the Congressional determination not to have the men on the public payroll.

It was a busy day for Craven. He appeared in the afternoon before the Lea Committee and in the morning before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

He told the Senate committee that he believed the FCC would soon recommend legislation to prevent future acquisition of radio stations by newspapers.

THESE MEN HAVE BEEN VOTED

WHO, in your opinion, are the ten Americans — in government, the armed forces or civil life—who have made the greatest contribution of leadership to the nation during the first two years of our formal participation in the war?

This significant question has been put by Newsweek to a distinguished jury of some 65 American editors, historians and news correspondents.

The question is significant for this reason: The core of a democracy's strength is its leadership. Leadership that is not constrained by force, but that is chosen by the free will of the people... or that comes about naturally through the sheer ability of the individual.

Leaders have helped us meet... and defeat... our enemies in all parts of the world. And leaders will be needed even more after the war, to help us avoid repetition of the mistakes of 1918.

These names, along with those of the men who selected them, are the keynote of a comprehensive review of America's two years of war in the December 6th Newsweek. It is published by Newsweek as a part of its continual aim to help keep America the best-informed nation in the world.

Copies of the December 6th Newsweek are on the newsstands today. If you are able to get a copy, please share it with as many friends as possible.

THE SECOND ANNIVERSARY OF PEARL HARBOR

Two years of war have wrought mighty changes in the United States. These changes—and their significance—are the theme of a special section of the December 6th Newsweek. Feature of the section is pictures and stories describing the ten men who have helped most in transforming the United States from a weakling to a military colossus. This section also includes a graphic presentation of production; the growth of our Army, Navy and Air Force; the cost of war and shipments of lend-lease; and the nation's far-flung battle-fronts. This review is particularly important for every thinking American to read. If you can't get a copy, make every effort to borrow one from a friend.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

What's in a Name? Try Some Agencies

At the Agriculture Department you'll find that: Burnham Asch, the man with the incendiary name, has an office next to the Forest Service official whose job is to prevent forest fires; William J. Meal is chief of the fruits and vegetables branch in War Foods Administration, and, it seems, Mr. Meal was overworked and he had a breakdown and his doctor ordered him to diet on fruits and vegetables. And the department has a bountiful stock of food names. It has two Mary Bean's. The legal department has a George A. Fruit and Fairfax Oyster is an expert on peanuts. In War Foods you can also find Maybert Corn, Samuel C. Salmon, Esther Olive and Florence Bee.

KLUTTZ

Arthur Walsh today will officially become a United States Senator, representing the State of New Jersey. But he was known as "Senator" Walsh in Federal Housing when he was an official in that agency here several years ago. At FHA at the time was Bill Flanders, who, it seems, was just a bit overawed by members of Congress and the way he bowed and scraped and "yes sir'd" them was the talk of the office. Walsh was well aware of Flanders' weakness, so he called him by phone one day and said: "Flanders, this is Senator Walsh speaking and I want to see you." Flanders only had time to get in a few sirs before Walsh added: . . . and I'll be in your office within five minutes." Flanders was nearly panic-stricken and the next five minutes were the most hectic on record at FHA. Walsh put in his appearance and it caused such a howl tha. from that day on he was called "Senator." Now he's really a Senator.

William H. Schubart, acting director of the Bureau of Supplies at Foreign Economic Administration, has made the following appointments: Requirements and supply branch, Victory Barry, acting director, and John C. Foulis, deputy; Sidney H. Scheuer is director of the foreign procurement and development branch; Alex Taub is chief engineer of the engineering branch, and Laurence J. Martin is director of the transportation and storage branch. His deputy is Lieut. Comdr. Donald Watson. Meantime FEA is being boiled down via consolidations to do away with overlapping and duplication. The mergers are expected to result in reduced personnel.

To the office of economic programs has been transferred the war trade staff from OEW and the reserve Lend-Lease and Government liaison division from Lend-Lease. The Bureau of Supplies will be one of the largest in FEA and transferred to it from OEW are: The office of exports except the Eastern Hemisphere and Latin-American exports divisions and the field coordination division. Also the office of imports except the African, general areas and Far Eastern division and part of the preclusive operations division. From the Office of Economic Warfare analysis will go the supply and resources, international air transport, industrial engineering staff and petroleum divisions.

Lend Lease will give up these activities to the Bureau of Supply: Requirements control, procurement control and materials redistribution, transportation and storage, requisition control, planning and development staff. Parts of the division of supply and transport of Foreign Relief also will go to the bureau. The Bureau of Areas, in brief, will get most of what wasn't given to the Supply Bureau such as the Soviet Supply, missions, foreign liaison divisions from Lend Lease the remainder of OEW's offices of imports, exports and warfare analysis.

Navy's four-star winners were given a real pep talk by First Class Cook Walter Davis who was wounded in a South Pacific battle when he was serving on the battleship South Dakota. Davis so impressed the mailroom employes that they signed a petition asking for more speakers like the fightin' cook. Davis, they said, was a wonderful morale builder. Meantime, more Navy employes are being recognized and rewarded by the 4-star program that is designed to save manpower and money. Monthly winners in the Bureau of Personnel are: Bessie Lee, Edith Francisco, Alberta Quail, Pauline Thompson, Laura Fonda, Bertha Hartman, Elizabeth Ryan, Dorothy McFarland, Ben Dowell, Margaret Rogers, Teressa Colburn, Ruby McIntosh and Thelma Bowers.

Representative Busbey, Illinois Republican, wants to be sure and make the headlines so he postponed until today his speech in which he'll attack the Civil Service Commission for instructing its 800 investigators not to ask certain questions regarding loyalty to this country. The legislator is expected to "expose" the United Federal Workers of America, the CIO union of white-collar workers, that complained to the commission because several investigators had asked several banned questions . . . Quarterly four-star winners at Navy's Bureau of Ships: Ruth Bethea, Vada Rowland, Mary Jane Vetter, Dorothy Dobbins, Marie Sydlowski, Lucy Whitley and Mattie Martin.

Enforcement Lack Cited in Liquor Rule

Lack of enforcement power was described as the main trouble of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board by Chairman Van Nuys of a Senate subcommittee investigating Nation-wide liquor conditions, after a meeting yesterday with ABC Board members.

Van Nuys, Democratic Senator from Indiana, declared after the closed session that the discussion was "laying a foundation" for the subcommittee inquiry which, he said, will probe distillers, wholesalers, retailers, hoarding, black markets, labeling and tax evasion.

"I was particularly interested in the District board's problems because it represents a cross-section of the whole country," Van Nuys commented. "Mr. Lodge (Thomas E. Lodge, ABC chairman), brought with him a large volume of figures and indicated that the board will cooperate fully with the Senate subcommittee."

"Only 3 or 4 Inspectors"

Concerning enforcement power, he said he was told that there were "only three or four inspectors" whose authority was restricted to revoking licenses.

Van Nuys added that he had learned from War Production Board officials that there is no likelihood of governmental release of distilleries, which are operating to capacity. "More distilleries may have to be built for war purposes," the Senator said, reiterating an announcement yesterday that there is no prospect of lifting the year-old ban on liquor production for civilian consumption.

Meanwhile on the House side Representative Cochran (Democrat) of Missouri asserted that he saw no reason to change the statement he made Tuesday when he charged that the District Commissioners had not cooperated with a citizens committee headed by James Colliflower, which had offered its services to help in alleviating the local liquor situation.

"I not only see no reason to withdraw my remarks, but I feel that the statements of Mr. Colliflower and Commissioner Mason confirm them," he said. "Mr. Mason was quoted as saying that he met with the committee at its invitation, outlining to its members everything he knew about the situation. In response to their query, 'What can we do?' he said he advised them that, in his opinion, there was nothing they could do at the present time.

"He was further quoted as saying the liquor dealers were trying to toss the problem into the laps of the Commissioners, and the Commissioners aren't having it.

"Congress—Not Liquor Dealers"

"I will say to Mr. Mason it is not the liquor dealers who are tossing them the problem; it is the Congress of the United States, which created the ABC Board, which is subordinate to the Commissioners.

"Mr. Mason says that they (the Commissioners) have no power to create price ceilings. That is true, but the Office of Price Administration has created ceilings and it is the duty of the ABC Board and the Commissioners to enforce those prices."

Cochran added that he found it "strange" to read that the ABC Board is meeting daily with the distributors who come under their jurisdiction. "It appears that the alcoholic board is going to be regulated by the distributors," he said.

"Can you imagine how a citizens' committee can be active when it is told that there is nothing it can do now?" the Congressman demanded. "It is my view that if this problem is not settled in a hurry, the ABC Board and the Commissioners are going to hear from Congress."

Calling upon the small investor in particular, the Treasury Department yesterday announced that this slogan has been adopted for the Fourth War Loan Drive for 14 billion dollars.

The Washington goal has not been set yet but it has been made known that the individual quota will be higher than in the last campaign although the over-all figure may be somewhat lower.

The drive will be held from January 18 to February 15.

Pearl Harbor Day Concert Artists Warmly Applauded

By Ray C. B. Brown

Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy Department, presents a Pearl Harbor Day Concert on Wednesday night in Department of the Interior Auditorium. Artists Rita Nicholson, soprano (Dorothy Redde Kmery, accompanist) and Marcus V. Seelig, piano. Program of songs by Pergolesi, Puccini, Handel, Delibes, Carnevali, Leoncavallo, Fontenailles, Wolfe, Herbert and Straus; piano compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy and Rakhmaninov.

Uniforms predominated in the Department of the Interior auditorium last evening when invited guests of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Air) and the Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics enjoyed a joint recital by Rita Nicholson and Marcus V. Seelig. Neither of these young musicians is to be criticized on the professional plane, as they are obviously not yet ready for that ordeal. Their talents were employed for the pleasure of their listeners, who gave them friendly applause, and friendly comments on their performance are in order.

Miss Nicholson has a light soprano voice of a fresh quality that will be more appreciable when more firmly supported on the breath. Her training has been good in matters of phrasing, flexibility and intonation, and her utterance is not constrained. Accompanied by Dorothy Radde group Pregolesi's "Si ti m'aml," Boheme," Handel's "Alma mia" Mimi's aria from Puccini's "La Boneme," Handel's "Alma mia" and Delibes' "Les Filles de Cadix."

Her second group included Carnevali's "Vieni, amore, con me," Leoncavallo's "Mattinata," Fontenailles' "Obstination," Jacques Wolfe's "British Children's Prayer," Victor Herbert's "Thine Alone," and "My Hero" from Oscar Strauss' "The Chocolate Soldier."

Marcus Seelig has a pleasant touch on the piano and a technique of modest dimensions. His playing was restrained in dynamics, his pedaling was adjutant to clear phrasing and a good quality of tone. A Bach prelude preceded his earnest reading of Beethoven's "Funeral March" sonata in A flat major. In a second group he combined three Chopin waltzes, Debussy's "Clair de Lune" and three preludes from Rakhmaninov's Opus 32.

National WLB Will Handle Arnold Bus Pay Dispute

In line with the promise of a WLB fact-finding panel to "expedite matters," the National War Labor Board has taken over the labor dispute case of the Arnold Operated Bus Lines, thereby eliminating the intermediary step of action by the Atlanta, Ga., regional board, it was announced yesterday.

The panel's recommendations will be in the hands of the board by the end of the week, at the latest, it was said. Before the case will be put on the docket for action both sides will have a chance to file a reply.

The drivers, in the meantime, are continuing operation pending a WLB decision, union spokesmen said. On November 19, the drivers stopped work and set a ten-day deadline to settle the case or "resume the union meeting." The "truce" expired Tuesday midnight but no action was taken.

The main point of disagreement is the demand for a 14 cents an hour raise, pressed by the men who are represented by the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes.

If the raise is granted, wages on the Arnold lines would be equalized with the present scale on the Capital Transit Co. The NWLB also has a wage agreement between Capital Transit and the union on its file, which would raise drivers' wages by five cents an hour.

Plan for Jobs and Security For All, First Lady Urges

Sacrifice of American soldiers is without justification unless America provides for future job and home security, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told a luncheon meeting of the Federal Bar Association, yesterday.

"Men on our fighting fronts are idealizing their place in the future. They want to return to a nation in which peace will bring security for themselves and their families," she said.

"We will fail them if we do not make a great effort to make their sacrifices count for a better future," she said.

The First Lady told of American patrols cutting their way by night through thick Pacific island jungles, to find themselves at dawn but half a mile from the starting point.

"They froze where they were at dawn," she related. "Sometimes in jungle swamps to their waists. A leaf moving ahead of them meant a Jap would die. If they moved a leaf it meant they would die."

No Muzzles Needed for Leashed Dogs

Leashed dogs are not required to wear muzzles, members of the police force were informed by special memorandum yesterday from the office of the police superintendent.

Policemen were told to direct their enforcement efforts as regards the rabies epidemic to "dogs running at large and unsecured."

The District Commissioners invoked muzzling restrictions last October as a substitute action following a request by health authorities. Leashing restrictions could not be invoked without further legislation, it was said. Although the epidemic continued, and one person died of hydrophobia last week, the Commissioners still have not recommended enabling legislation.

Meanwhile four more persons reported to police yesterday that they had been bitten by dogs. They are Henry Leimdach, 7, of 615 Elliott st. ne.; Benjamin F. Anderson, Negro, 11, of 1230 Duncan st. ne., James Purcell, 57, of 908 Shepherd st. nw., who refused treatment, and Robert P. Bradshaw, 42, of 1838 C st. se.

Landlords Told to Study Rent Facts

An order requiring new landlords to file with the rent control office written statements certifying they have examined the applications or schedules of their predecessors on file in that office and know their contents was issued yesterday from the rent control office.

By this order it becomes part of a landlord's responsibility to know he is charging a fair rent, and the landlord who does not take every precaution possible to make his first rent fair may find himself in court to meet tenants' suits for overcharge after having his rent lowered by the administrator, according to Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

He said the new rule eliminates filing of an application to automatically determine a tentative rent. In the past this procedure caused confusion in court cases.

From now on the new landlord must file a statement with the rent administrator's office certifying he knows what the rent ceiling and service standard are for the particular premises.

Cogswell said also yesterday that an investigation of more than 600 cases of evictions by landlords who said they wanted to repossess premisse for their own use had revealed surprisingly little violation of the law.

He said numerous objections had been made that such landlords were in reality rerenting at higher rates, but that investigations did not reveal this to be true in the large majority of cases.

Fellow employes held a short farewell ceremony for Mrs. Edith H. Hunter Tuesday in the office of the superintendent of recreation upon her resignation after 25 years service at Central Community Center.

Superintendent Milo F. Christiansen lauded Mrs. Hunter for her continuing progressive vision while on the job and her complete cooperation with others in the District Recreation Department. She began her service under the old Community Center organization and remained at Central after the reorganization of the Recreation Department.

Others in the department who spoke of their association with Mrs. Hunter were Sybil Baker, Richard Tennyson, and Maude Parker.

A silver plate and an umbrella were presented.

The Maryland men were Pvt. John D. Nelson, Crisfield, and Sergt. Gerald Millar, Cumberland. Virginians on the list were Pvt. Paddy H. Buchanan, Chilhowie and Pvt. Charlie W. Petty, Java.

Study Assured For D.C. Report On Sanitation

Recommendations in the D'Alesandro House District Subcommittee report on insanitary conditions in the Capital will form a basis for much of the work by the District Appropriations Subcommittee in January, Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of the House Appropriations Committee declared last night.

"I am certain that the subcommittee will be extremely interested in Mr. D'Alesandro's report, which I read carefully when it was issued in June," the Missouri Congressman asserted. "I can give you every assurance that its members will give every consideration to the improvement of Washington's health and sanitation problems."

He added that the matter of all District appropriations will be taken up shortly after the New Year by the subcommittee, as has been customary in previous years, and that a chairman will be named within the next two weeks.

The D'Alesandro report, prompted by a speech by Representative Plumley (Republican) of Vermont in which he predicted a widespread epidemic unless insanitary conditions were remedied, was completed in June and approved last week by the full District Committee.

At that time it was declared that much of the remedial action recommended by the subcommittee had been taken by the Commissioners, and that further steps would be left to the Appropriations Committee. Among these steps cited in the report were low-cost family housing developments, increase of the Health Department staff, and elimination of slum areas.

Victory Sidelights

Envoy Hails Success of Rag Drive

Calling the discarded clothing and rag salvage drive "proof to the unity of freedom-loving peoples of the whole world in this struggle against Hitlerite aggression," Soviet Ambassador Gromyko yesterday wished "the best success to your people in carrying out this honorary task."

Under the direction of the District Salvage Committee, Washington churches, the Red Cross, Volunteers of America, Salvation Army, and Goodwill Industries are presently engaged in a collection of discarded garments for destitute people and rags for various defense purposes.

Murder Jury To Get Henry Case Today

The fate of Jeffries Henry, 36, former District policeman, will be placed in the hands of the jury today when defense and prosecution make their final arguments, with the Government asking the death penalty and the defense acquittal for the man accused of slaying his wife in a downtown drugstore last April.

Two Gallinger Hospital psychiatrists were the final witnesses called yesterday by the Government in an attempt to refute defense arguments that Henry had suffered from complete loss of memory, because of alcoholism, and that none of the events between last February and a week after the shooting were known to him.

Henry, the father of four children by his first marriage, is accused of shooting to death his estranged wife, Lola Jane Henry, when he returned here from New Orleans. Testimony at the trial brought out that he had bigamously married two other women a short time before the tragedy.

At the conclusion of the trial yesterday both Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert of Gallinger and Dr. John E. Lind of St. Elizabeth's testified that in their opinion Henry was sane at the time they examined him.

On cross-examination by defense Attorney J. Bernard Flaherty, Dr. Lind said that it was possible for persons suffering from certain types of alcoholism to go for long periods without remembering what was actually happening and that such persons might have hallucinations. At the time of his arrest Henry told police his wife had been running around with servicemen. The defense has never sought to deny that Henry fired the shot that killed his wife.

OPA Penalizes Two Restaurateurs And Gas Dealer

The owners of two Washington restaurants and one service station proprietor were temporarily under restraint yesterday from buying certain rationed commodities after they were found guilty by an OPA commissioner of violating regulations.

Celess Young, owner of the Parkway Service Station at 4th and New York ave. nw., was barred from purchasing gasoline for one week beginning yesterday when he was found guilty of not having sufficient gasoline coupons for fuel previously purchased.

The restaurant owners are George Pang, whose restaurant is at 823 Upshur st. nw., and Harry Raganis, owner of Harry's restaurant at 637 Pennsylvania ave. se., who were both charged with overdrawing their meat and fats accounts. They were barred from further supplies until their past purchases were covered.

Coroner's Verdict Withheld in Death Of Woman Here

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night withheld, "pending further investigation," a certificate in the death of Miss Sallie Estfan, 20, who was found dead of illuminating gas in her apartment at 118 Irvington st. sw., yesterday.

Mrs. Marian Warman of 124 Irvington discovered the victim after benig attracted to the apartment by an odor of gas. Four burners were open and unlighted on a stove, it was said, and Miss Estfan was unconscious on the floor.

Efforts to revive the woman were futile, and she was pronounced dead by a doctor from Emergency Hospital at 2:25 p. m.

Detective Sergt. W. D. Perry, homicide squad, said a note addressed simply "Tommy" was found in the room, but that it gave no indication the woman intended to end her life. She lived with a sister, Mrs. Mae Sherman.

McNabb Ruling Held Law Menace

By Anne Hagner

Wrecking of "the whole law enforcement machinery of the United States" by the Supreme Court decision in the McNabb case was predicted yesterday by Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, author of a bill which would nullify the now-famous ruling by eliminating the time element in arraignment of criminal suspects.

"Mr. Justice Frankfurter, who handed down the McNabb decision, did not have enough experience in criminal courts to attach sufficient importance to the far-flung effects of the case," Hobbs told a House Judiciary Subcommittee holding hearings on the bill.

"There may be 100 cases a day, this Nation over, in which self-confessed criminals are acquitted because they were not arraigned as soon as they were taken into custody," Hobbs declared.

A Law of Civilization

"I beg of you, do not prevent the victory of civilization over embattled warriors of crime. Every day sees added numbers of criminals turned loose, but it is a law of civilization to punish a criminal who is admittedly guilty."

The case upon which the disputed decision was established involved three Tennessee moonshiners who were charged with the murder of a Treasury revenue agent. The moonshiners, Benjamin Freeman and Raymond McNabb, were held 2 days by Treasury officers without arraignment and during that time confessed to the crime.

Effect Widespread

The two men were convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to 45 years imprisonment, but the convictions were appealed to the Supreme Court on the grounds that the confessions were "involuntary." The ruling was that in several congressional acts, legislation stated that suspects "shall be immediately taken and taken forthwith before an arraigning magistrate."

District authorities first felt the meaning of the decision when the Court of Appeals here reversed the conviction of James Mitchell, "society burglar," who had been convicted of housebreaking and larceny on the basis of a confession made before arraignment.

Representative Hobbs, commenting on earlier testimony concerning third-degree methods being used by police on suspects before arraignment, said: "It doesn't matter whether the prisoner in the McNabb case or any other case is treated with all the deference, all the consideration, all the overwhelming solicitude that the most maudlin person would require—no matter how well the prisoner is treated, if his confession is obtained before his arraignment, he is permitted to go free."

Hearings to Continue

Judge Harold M. Stephens of the District Court of Appeals, another witness, told the committee that "the cure for third-degree methods is not in the exclusion of evidence but in the improvement of personnel and facilities of our law-enforcement officers."

Under the McNabb decision, he said, there was a problem when a crime was committed by a group of persons. When one man was arraigned, Stephens asserted, the other guilty parties would be warned sufficiently to make their escape.

"That may be the proper price to pay for the rule that suspects have to be arraigned immediately," he observed.

The hearings on the Hobbs bill will continue at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

'McNabb' Plea Denied

The McNabb decision and the claim that evidence was illegally seized were unsuccessfully brought into play by the defense yesterday at the opening of the trial in District Court of John Walter Morton, 39-year-old mechanic, charged with the second-degree murder of Mrs. Grace Grubbs Groome, 57, whose badly beaten body was found last August in Rock Creek Park.

The defense claimed that too long a time had elapsed between the arrest and arraignment of Morton and that the circumstances came within the precincts of the McNabb decision.

At the same time the defense claimed that Morton's bloody shirt was seized by police without a proper warrant when they arrested him at 1420 Meridian pl. nw. Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher overruled both motions.

These developments came after a jury of eight women and four men were selected to decide the case. Defense attorney is Charles F. Hailer with the Government being represented by John Burke, assistant United States attorney.

The body of Mrs. Groome, a former Government stenographer, was found in Rock Creek Park, her head crushed. Morton was arrested two days later when detectives traced the purchaser of a broken liquor bottle found at the scene of the crime.

At the time of his arrest Morton vigorously denied the crime. He admitted being with Mrs. Groome the night she died but told police he had left her after purchasing a bottle of liquor which, he claims, he had given to the woman.

A witness for the prosecution was Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, who testified that the cause of death was a skull fracture. He said there were numerous bruises about the head and body and that there were indications of an attempted criminal assault.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The practice of giving the baby whatever he wants of a large formula is somewhat new to some mothers. They have become accustomed to thinking of formulas in definite amounts of 6 to 8 ounces per bottle.

Yet they do not notice that baby may leave part of one bottle and yet would be glad to drink more, if there were more, at some other feeding period.

Even if it seems a little uneconomical, once the mother has learned that baby will take five ounces at 2 p. m. and eight or nine at 6 p. m. she can figure accordingly. If baby is satisfied with the amounts he is given, one need not worry or make changes.

When one is preparing a complementary formula which is intended to piece out the deficiencies of the breast-feeding, it is more than ever necessary to allow for irregular amounts. At one feeding the baby may want little or nothing, the breast feeding being satisfying to him.

At first allow more than the baby takes, until the evidence is piled up so that formulas can be apportioned into the bottle with some knowledge of how much there should be. With the breast-fed baby the early morning feedings will tend to be the most satisfying, the afternoon and last feeding of the day the least so.

One must reiterate frequently that it would be far easier to feed all babies successfully were there inflexible rules about amounts, strengths of formula, amounts of sugar, etc. There are not.

There are standard formulas and amounts for children of different ages and weights, but these must be adjusted to the small individual whose tastes and appetite are the first considerations.

It's Wise Economy to Buy Proven Quality

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Boycott on Glamour

If there are any women of character, taste and courage left in America, it is time they banded together to set an example of plain dressing and high thinking to the rest of their sex. It is also time that they began a social boycott of the wartime clothes horse.

Apparently the Government can't or won't do anything about the orgy of feminine glamour spending that is reaching its climax in pre-Christmas shopping. Tax bills or compulsory savings can't be depended upon to stop the frantic scramble for fur muffs, ermine hats, alligator handbags, blazing costume jewelery, courtesan lingerie, etc., that is now causing so much criticism of American women and also speeding inflation.

Many Women on Spending Spree

Preaching and patriotic appeals apparently have had no influence. According to financial reports 1943 is expected to be the biggest buying year in the history of the Nation. The July sale of furs increased over that of the previous year by more than 100 per cent. Department stores' supplies, especially in the high-priced luxury lines, are said to be melting away. Women warworkers, wives of warworkers, wives of war profiteers, career girls who have fallen into well-paid men's jobs, women whose husband's businesses have been prosperous, working housewives —everyone in fact but the white-collar girl—are fighting to carry away from the stores $39.50 earrings, fancy bottles of fabulous perfumes, dazzling cocktail sets and other occoutrements of high life.

In an article entitled "Hot Money" in the current issue of The Ladies Home Journal, J. C. Furnas presents an appalling picture of feminine spending in a war boom town. He finds that the main spenders are the young rather than the older women, as the latter can remember the last war and the last depression. The girl who formerly earned $8 a a week as a housemaid and now makes $60 as a riveter is cited as one of the newly war rich who goes wild in her spending. Also the girl who has quit high school to make easy money has no sense of proportion or values in handling her money.

It is useless, of course, to try to warn any of these spenders of the coming day of reckoning. Many of them have the martyr complex. They have never had anything, they tell you, and they are going to have it now. Many others buy in panic. There is going to be a shortage of goods for the next few years, they've heard, and they're certainly going to get theirs while they can. Still others are husband-hunting in a world short of men. In all no doubt is the subconscious urge for greater adornment that comes to women at a time when human life everywhere is being depleted and they are increasingly conscious of themselves as the perpetuators of the race.

Mink Coat Ideal Influenced Life

Also we must face the fact that now in the United States we are reaping the results of our material civilization and our recent preoccupation with glamour, smartness, chic, best-dressed women, etc. Nearly every girl of recent years has grown up with the idea of a mink coat as her chief goal in life, and if she missed it, felt that she had been deprived of her birthright.

To undo the mischief caused by our mercenary and trivial standards will not be easy. But if women who know better are going to sit by and let such vulgar, tawdry ideals continue to dominate feminine life, and even perhaps wreck our Nation, then the situation indeed is hopeless. If they are going to be drawn into this disgraceful melee themselves, then indeed we are a Nation of weaklings unfit for self-government.

If women who are concerned about this sort of thing would take the matter in hand and not only set sacrificial and patriotic examples themselves in their buying, but use their influence to set outside the social pale those who bedeck themselves to dance at humanity's wake, it might have far more effect than governmental decrees. After all, in a democracy, presumably responsible adults should be ruled by their own consciences and by public opinion rather than by law.

Intelligent Use of Prayer Has Worked Wonders In Woman's Life, An Experience Shared by Many Of Her Friends; She Lists Books That Give Light

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Thinking over one of your columns of recent date,—in which you quoted a psychiatrist as saying, "Only God can help a drunkard, and then only if he is willing to be helped"—I am prompted to write a long promised (to myself) letter to you. Some years ago, in one of your columns, you listed three inspirational books: "The Conquest of Fear," by Basil King; "It Shall Be Done Unto You," by Lucius Humphrey; and "In Tune With the Infinite," by Ralph Waldo Trine. Being interested in that type of literature, I read these books; and found them remarkably beneficial. Now, I see in your more recent columns that you have added, "The Sermon on the Mount," by Emmet Fox, which is also very good.

As I live and learn, and particularly as I read the problems which many confused persons bring to you,—problems having to do with "sick" relationships, involving infidelity, alcoholism and other infirmities of character,—the more I am convinced that these are problems which (as the psychiatrist says) only God can help. I have found for myself, through personal experience, as have many of my friends, that there is sure and lasting help for trouble, through simple prayer. Emmet Fox, author of "The Sermon on the Mount," has also published a little pamphlet called, "The Golden Key," which teaches us how to pray, scientifically and effectively.

This little book gives a clear explanation, satisfying to the heart of the sincerely religious person of any denomination whatsoever, of how to put prayer into practice. And by following its instructions, thousands of people have worked themselves out of difficulties. I met a girl in Chicago who told me her doctor had given her a copy and it saved her life. And I have a friend here who says that people marvel at the great change for the better that has come over her since she has learned to pray from the heart. But she adds, "You have to be sincere, and faithfully practice it."

SO, what I want to say is this: If any of your readers would like a copy of this little pamphlet, "The Golden Key,"—I have a limited supply I will gladly send out as gifts, if they will telephone me at WIsconsin 5947. You are certainly doing a great service in manifold ways; but none greater than that of turning your readers' minds into channels of spiritual thinking, whereby their problems will be solved for all time. Sincerely,
RACHEL.

This Writer Applauds Alcoholics Anonymous

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If you can make space for this letter, perhaps my comments may be of value to "W. L. S." and her husband, whose problem was discussed in your column of October 28. In their case, an idyllic marriage of nearly 30 years is being threatened by the husband's recent heavy drinking,—which he laughs about, while his wife worries. During the past year, I have been required to make long trips, at regular intervals, to help sober up a relative of mine,—a man now in his fifties, who, after 25 years of "social drinking," had taken to hitting the bottle heavily.

AT FIRST, his sprees were spaced about six months apart; but during the past year, he had been going on "bats" about every two months, staying more or less drunk from two to four weeks at a time,—until he would be completely exhausted from lack of food and rest. To the detached bystander, his performance was tragic; though he seemed to think (or at least protested) that he was "having a good time" in his cups. In many respects, his background situation is similar to that of the husband of "W. L. S.,"—but his drink problem, at its worst, was probably more advanced than the latter's is, as yet But unless the latter gets control of his problem now, it can and doubtless will wreck his life and break up his home.

Majority Who Join Conquer Drink Habit

I CANNOT speak with authority about institutional treatment or so-called "cures" of alcoholism. However, I do know such treatment is expensive, often inconvenient for the patient's family, and tends, unfortunately, to damage his reputation. That, of course, is just one person's opinion. But I can confidently recommend the treatment provided by Alcoholics Anonymous, Inc. It is the most intelligent and helpful approach to solving the problem that I know; and best of all, it doesn't cost a penny, since there are no dues, although voluntary contributions are accepted. I understand that 75 per cent of those who join Alcoholics Anonymous, to get the benefit of its group theraphy, find permanent relief from the drink habit.

MY RELATIVE now belongs to the group and is making real progress. He is most happy about it, as is the whole family, I would like to remind that the Washington group meets regularly three times a week, on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings, in the clubrooms at 1401 Fourteenth st. nw., third floor. For detailed information on the group program, telephone ADams 9562. Yours very truly,
R. J. C.

Youth Needs a Wider Outlook, Young Sonya Stokowski Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Young people are thinking and talking about the postwar world—after all it will be their world. But it is confused, not clear thinking," said blond, blue-eyed Sonya Stokowski, daughter of the famous symphony conductor, Leopold Stokowski.

"For the most part, the young folks' outlook is completely American, not international," explained this pretty miss who has been across the ocean 17 times, including 9 trips to Europe where she has lived and studied. "They ought to study and read more. Then they would react more objectively and less personally."

Now playing the part of Mrs. Alexander Hamilton in "The Patriots" at the National Theater, alert, youthful Sonya knows whereof she speaks, for she comes into contact with thousands of boys and girls in all sections of the country. Only 21 years of age, she discusses all subjects with a much more mature mind.

When she isn't touring the Nation in a play you will find Sonya knee-deep in war work. In New York, she gives many hours to the American Theater Wing, the Red Cross and the Merchant Seamen's Club. Also she works on the Interceptor Command for the Air Force. Sonya does everything from routine filing and typing to knitting or serving as captain of a shift at the Stage Door Canteen.

Those Southern Boys

Southern lads seem to make the most impression upon her. "You remember them longer than the others," she explained. "Somehow they seem to have more personality and individuality."

SONYA STOKOWSKI

No, the Dixie sailors, soldiers, merchant seamen or marines aren't always the best looking, nor the most polite. She recalls a tall, lanky Texas cowboy who was rude, but definitely charming; a chubby Mississippian, known for his good nature. Anyway, it's some little characteristic, be it good or bad, by which the Southerners get themselves remembered.

Only a few days ago Miss Stokowski received her first V-mail letter. It had been over a year since she had seen the corporal, whom she met at one of the clubs where she does volunteer work. Only a Southern boy would expect you to remember him after a year and a half of silence. She isn't sure, but thinks it is from the lad whom everyone called the Southern Colonel.

"Are you in love?" I asked her.

"If I were, I wouldn't tell you," she replied with a friendly smile.

Parents Both Musicians

Her mother is talented Olga Samaroff, former concert pianist, now on the faculty of Juilliard School of Music in New York. Surrounded by so much musical genius you'd think that Sonya would naturally take to music. Not so; the stage is her first love.

Her first taste came when she joined the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York at the age of 14. Often she had parts in summer stock and in 1940 got an understudy part in George Abbott's play, "The White-Haired Boy." When the young leading lady was taken ill just before the opening, Sonya went on in her stead.

Later she appeared in Bucks County Playhouse, famous summer theater, with Charles Butterworth in "George Washington Slept Here" and went on tour with Phil Baker in "Charley's Aunt." First Broadway part was that of a Polish girl, Olga, in "Letters to Lucerene."

Sincere, a hard worker, friendly and talented, Sonya promises to go far in the theatrical world. Despite the fact that she is the daughter of the renowned Leopold Stokowski and great Olga Samaroff, she is not spoiled or affected.

Her hobbies? She likes all volunteer work for organizations such as Red Cross, merchant seamen's clubs. She will pitch in and work like fury for any worthy cause, but draws the line at soliciting funds. Clean-cut, she excels in sports. She likes people, and people like her.

Miss Wilson Is Bride of Navy Man

Baskets of pastel chrysanthemums, palms and candelabra decorated the altar of the National City Christian Church yesterday when Miss Marjorie Louise Wilson became the bride of James Edward Leonard, jr., USNR.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Wilson of this city and Mr. Leonard is the son of J. E. Leonard of Waltice, La., and Mrs. Allie Claunch of Heliest, La. Officiating at the 8 o'clock service was the Rev. J. Warren Hastings.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of white satin and fingertip length veil, held with a pearl coronet. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor, Mrs. Velma White, was costumed in rose taffeta with shoulder-length veil to match and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Miss Eloise Cooper, Miss Elinor Salb, Mrs. Ruth Allison and Mrs. Louis Allen were bridesmaids, wearing gowns in pastel shades of satin and carrying nosegays.

Brilliant Sulgrave Fete Draws Many Notables

Mrs. George Mesta Is Hostess to Distinguished Company; Many Out-of-Towners Attend

By Peggy Preston

"When Pearl Mesta gives a party—it IS a party," observed one of the guests yesterday at one of the outstandingly gala fetes of the season.

Specifically, it was an "after 5:30" in-gathering at the Sulgrave Club where Mrs. George Mesta was hostess to several dozen Washington notables and a number of distinguished out-of-towners.

Before long, Mrs. Mesta plans to be off to New York and then to the West, with a Christmas stop-over in her beloved Oklahoma City, and probably a trip on to California before she returns to Washington. Yesterday's party, therefore, had a "farewell-for-awhile" accent, which phase wasn't so sad as it might be if popular Mrs. Mesta hadn't made definite promises to be back again—soon.

The party had another pleasant purpose. It honored Mrs. Charles Kittle of Chicago, who is in town on the anniversary of the "Blackout Ball" which she staged so successfully here last year for the benefit of the Stage Door Canteen. With Mrs. Kittle and Mrs. Mesta in the informal receiving line was lovely, blond Josephine Houston, stage and radio songstress, an old friend of the hostess, who has been in Washington for the past fortnight.

Capital celebrities were literally on all sides. House Speaker Sam Rayburn, who manages to skip more parties than virtually any headline Washingtonians, was the center of constant attention. From the moment he walked in to shake hands with the hostess until he bade her goodby helf an hour later, he was completely surrounded by friends and admirers.

Postmaster General In Attendance

Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker were among those present, as were scores of Senators and Representatives.

House Minority Leader Joseph Martin snared his share of the spotlight. Republicans converged on all sides, offering him congratulations on the results of the recent Kentucky elections. "Kentucky did it on her own," he kept repeating proudly. "And we're going to see a lot more States doing the same thing."

Alf Landon, former Kansas Governor and one-time presidential candidate, smiled and bowed his way through the distinguished throng. Close by his side was the Senator from Kansas, Arthur Capper, and near at hand, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, Harrison E. Spangler.

There were delegations in every corner. Mrs. Peter A. Drury spotted one and decided to make it a real reunion of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Greeting her was a group of Irishmen, good and true, Senators Ernest W. McFarland of Arizona, Pat McCarran of Nevada, Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, and former Senator Henry F. Ashurst. Joining the "clan" forthwith were Representative Mike Monroney, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hayes, who hail from County Kerry, via Oklahoma.

Dozens of representatives from Army and Navy circles were in attendance. Lieut. Frank McAdams, jr., a rising young Democratic leader from Chicago, was an early arrival and captured the attention of Mrs. Clark Woodward when he voiced his praise of her admiral husband.

'Best Party Of Season'

Among guests who filled the upper drawing room and foyer at the Sulgrave were Senator and Mrs. Guy Gillette, Senator James J. Davis, Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land, Mrs. William E. Borah, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Miss Vera Bloom, Capt. and Mrs. John Henderson, Miss Eleanor Martin, portrait artist, and Lieut. George Abell.

Still more were Frank Hightower of Oklahoma City, Robert Wilkinson of New York, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. George Holmes, Judge and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Ralph Harris, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mrs. Olie M. James, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Lieut. Comdr. David Quinn, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Lieut. and Mrs. Luther Matthew Bolton, George Williams, Mrs. H. Conger Pratt, and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Clarence Hewes and scores of others.

As one departing guest put it: "This was the biggest and best party of the season." And so it was.

Capt. Jane Dixon Wells and Lieut. Ruth Perry greeted Mrs. Roosevelt upon her arrival and escorted her to the speaker's chair. The First Lady was introduced by Maj. Dorothy Lee Ward, director of the AWHRC Washington unit.

Hostesses for the afternoon were Lieuts. Katherine Byron, Louise Powell, Lulu Young, Corinne Payne Phelps, Ethel Gearheart, Vladimir Rybar. Walt Disney, Cartoon Wizard, Comes to Capital on War Mission; Would Rather Not Say What—Now

THE MAN WHO gained fame and fortune by animating a mouse and calling it Mickey . . . the delightful creator of Donald Duck, Dopey and Oswald, the rabbit . . . the world-famous cartoonist who has turned his talent, full force, into the war effort and is mighty glad he had that opportunity—in other words, Walt Disney of Hollywood, is back in Washington for his first visit in more than a year.

Well, you might call it a visit. Actually, his eastward trip has a very definite wartime tie-up . . . but what it is, Mr. Disney won't tell. Not now, anyway.

I found that out yesterday shortly after Mr. Disney checked in at the Mayflower, got his bags unpacked, and settled down for a brief interview.

"Let's talk about something else," he said with a twinkle in his dark eyes . . . when I tried to pin him down on the why and wherefore of his visit here. Also, he wanted to soft-pedal references to parties that are sure to swirl about him every moment he can find. "I'm really here on business," he said quietly. There will be a lot of conferences, and they'll take up most of my time. There's not much else to say about it . . . now."

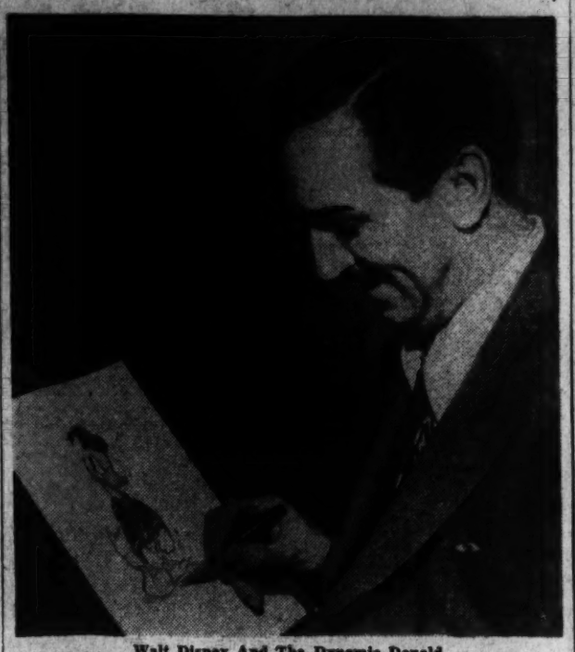
THE TONE OF finality in his voice closed off that topic, and talk turned elsewhere. There was mention of his Hollywood production plant, and the fact that 80 per cent of his staff is now directly engaged in war work, and there was reference to the women he employs and the type of drawing they do best. Finally, there was a bit of gossip about Donald Duck and the wide range of wartime activities in which he has been engaged the past two years.

Mr. Disney is a living refutation of the theory that all geniuses are high-strung, temperamental, and generally "difficult" people. He's as natural, as easy to talk to, as warmly sympathetic as the proverbial boy next door to whom you used to tell your troubles. He speaks in measured tones, and he smiles with his eyes as well as his dark-mustached lips.

Proudly, he said that 170 of his former artists were now in the armed services and that 10 former women artists were either WACS or WAVES. Yes, there had been great difficulty in keeping his plant in production during wartime. He had taken on more women artists to replace the men ("There are about 300 women on my staff now") but that step hadn't solved the problem.

"Very few women are good cartoonists, you know," he observed. No, I didn't know; hadn't thought about it, in fact. I wondered why.

Mr. Disney didn't know exactly why. "Women artists are wonderful at putting on those delicate finishing touches that are so important to animated cartoons," he said, quickly. "But the men handle the caricature part of the job much better."



Walt Disney And The Dynamic Donald

SEEMS AS IF women artists have given Mr. Disney trouble in more ways than one. There's the problem—not only of getting competent ones, but also those who will stay on the job. "This is the way it works," he explained. "I hire a capable woman artist and put her to work. She turns out a nice job, and the men working around her begin to sit up and take notice. Soon they're taking too much notice . . . and before I know it I can hear wedding bells ringing in the offing. In due course there's a marriage . . . and then my able woman artist has her mind more on a home than on animated cartoons."

Now I wasn't to get him wrong, said Mr. Disney. He thought women—some women anyway—were mighty able at their jobs . . . only they're apt not to stick with them long enough. And that was that.

About Donald Duck? Well, of course, he could be followed in the daily strip day by day. But he had been busy with some activity on the side, too, said his creator. In a word, he is up to his broad bill in war work. He's still helping in bond drives; has appeared on innumerable posters and in countless poses to warn us against "telling the enemy" anything; and has even served in the field with the United States armed forces. The official insignia for a Navy mobile hospital in the South Pacific features the indomitable Donald rushing to the emergency with a stethoscope, absorbent cotton and a hypodermic syringe.

"Yes, I'm glad to say, Donald continues to do his bit," said Walt Disney. And his dark eyes twinkled again.

Alf Landon Feted During Visit Here

Army, Navy Turn Out For Chilean Fete

Gold braid of high-ranking Army and Navy officers added glitter to the scene yesterday at the late afternoon party given by Gen. Manuel Tovarias, chief of the Chilean Air Force, who is paying Washington a return visit after a tour of the United States inspecting aviation plants, air training schools and defense centers.

The Chilean colors and the Stars and Stripes had prominent position in the congressional room of the Statler Hotel and bouquets of bright chrysanthemums decorated the long buffet table.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Marshall were among those who had been asked to this pleasant party and other guests were Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and Mrs. Arnold and Admiral and Mrs. William O. Spears.

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels were there and members of the embassy staff and their wives. In the company of more than 300 were the military and air attaches of the Latin-American embassies with their wives; and members of General Tovarias' party which includes Brig. Gen. Oscar Herreros, Chief of Staff of the Chilean Air Force; Col. Edison Diaz and Lieut. Col. Javier Undurraga. The visitors will leave the end of the week for their homeward journey, visiting Panama and Brazil en route.

Washington Resident Greets Mother on Gripsholm From East

Minister-Attache of Spanish Embassy And Senora de Danis Also on Board

Mrs. Pearsons Rust had a happy reunion yesterday with her mother, Mrs. Francis Stinewell, who arrived in Jersey City, a repatriate on board the Gripsholm. Mrs. Stinewell has been living in China for the last seven years. When the two have "talked out," Mrs. Rust hopes to bring her mother to Washington for a visit.

First to step ashore amid wild cheers and shouting of excited passengers were the Minister-Attache of the Spanish Embassy, Eduardo Danis, and Senora de Danis, who left Washington three months ago to make the trip to Portuguese East India and back. Senor Danis was in charge of the interests of the Latin-American passengers.

One former resident of Takoma Park who arrived on the Gripsholm will not be able to return home, at least for a few days. He is Elihu C. Wood, formerly on the faculty of Washington Missionary College, who as an architect designed many of Takoma Park's landmarks. Because he is a Canadian, Mr. Wood must first go to Montreal to obtain his visa before he will be able to return here. However, he'll be met in Montreal by his wife and son, Prof. Wilton Wood, both American-born, who left their homes in Takoma Park yesterday to be in Montreal for the reunion.

Taken prisoner by the Japanese when Hong Kong fell, Mr. Wood has been at the Stanley Internment Camp for two years. Only word Mrs. Wood had from her husband since his capture was a short letter she received a year and a half ago. "I am in good health. One thing I am so thankful for is that you reached home before having to go to a prison camp," it read.

Mrs. Wood, who lived in China for 16 years, arrived in this country several weeks before Pearl Harbor. Well known in Takoma Park, Mr. Wood served in the Orient as an architect and builder for Seventh-day Adventist schools and institutions. He designed and helped build Columbia Hall, the Washington Sanitarium, and many other structures in Takoma.

Another former Takoma Park resident listed aboard the exchange ship is Mrs. Ethelena B. Anderson, whose husband J. P. Anderson, is still being held prisoner by the Japanese. The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Edward of Takoma Park, Mrs. Anderson, served as treasurer to the secretary of the General Conference Seventh-day Adventists at world headquarters in Takoma Park until 1922 when she went to China to marry Mr. Anderson. In 1932 she returned to Takoma Park to care for her parents who were failing in health. She returned to China in 1938 to join her husband, then superintendent of the Canton Mission.

Meeting Mr. Wood, Mrs. Anderson and other Seventh-day Adventist workers who were on the Gripsholm was N. F. Brewer who returned here six months ago from the Stanley prison camp and Elder E. D. Dick, secretary of the General Conference.

Martha Ellyn's Household Gleanings

Draperies Are Utilitarian as Well as Decorative

By Martha Ellyn

"By her windows you shall know her." That is a thought I have heard expressed often about feminine housekeeping. Women have always taken pride in attractively curtained windows. No single decorative touch adds more liveableness and dainty finish to a room than curtains or draperies.

Draperies are utilitarian as well as decorative. They are usually bought for their decorative effect because they furnish a keynote of color for the room and help to unify floor, ceiling, walls and windows.

When selecting material for draperies, color, line and pattern should be kept in mind. A window is a part of a wall, so consider the decorative effect of a drapery, not just the "dressing up" of a window. In other words, style your draperies as a dress is styled.

Draperies have practical advantages as well as decorative ones. Light-proof ones may solve the blackout problem. Draperies drawn across windows at night keep a room warm in winter. The Government estimates that 10% heat may be retained by drawing window coverings. When pushed back to let in the daylight, drapery folds may absorb the cold draughts that may seep in along the side of the window frames.

Glare and heat caused by bright sunlight may be softened and interiors kept cooler by the use of draperies. They also give privacy and can be used to advantage in crowded quarters, to partition off sections of rooms.

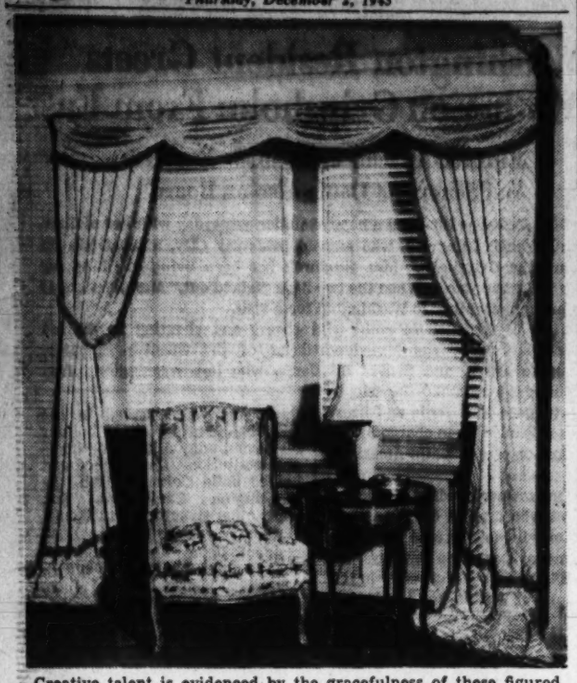
Good fabric as well as good workmanship is important in draperies. The fabric should not stretch, sag or hang in limp, weak lines. Above all, it should be washable or dry cleanable. The most desirable characteristics of drapery materials are reliable colors and controlled shrinkage.

The ambitious home sewer can fashion draperies that will be decoratively correct and of satisfactory construction. Every woman takes pride in the workmanship of her own hands. If draperies are cut and sewed correctly, they do not present an insurmountable problem. Book stores have fine home decorating books which give instructions and illustrations, step-by-step, for making draperies.

You can add to the looks of draperies, also immeasurably to their life, by frequent brushings and periodical cleaning. When soil which lodges on the fabric becomes imbedded, it is difficult to remove. Light brushing and shaking help to free the dust. The hand vacuum does a fine job.

Whether draperies should be washed or dry-cleaned depends upon the construction. A lined drapery should be cleaned, because the lining may shrink, more or less, than the drapery when washed. It is also difficult to press successfully a lined drapery.

Unless the fabric is resistant to sunlight, the drapery should not be exposed to direct sunlight unnecessarily. When faded in streaks it is not a joy to behold.



Creative talent is evidenced by the gracefulness of these figured draperies, accented with green fringe: Additional length was given for use at longer windows than original ones, by addition at bottom, with fringe hiding seam

Pen Women's League Plans For Art Fair

Activity is the watchword about the studio of the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women, these days, for on Wednesday the members will conduct their annual Victory Book and Art Fair.

Mrs. Nelle Miller Wiggins, the general chairman, has selected a working group of assistants, each of whom is busily engaged in promoting her specialty.

There will be practically everything for sale at the booths, although most of the effort is being concentrated on the art, book, poetry, white elephant and food tables, with fortune-telling running a close second, to say nothing of the delicious luncheon to be served at 12:30.

Activity All Day Long

Admission to the bazaar may be gained by presenting a 10-cent war stamp, or 9 cents in change, and there will be something of interest going on all the time, from the opening hour at 10:30 a. m., to the close at 7 p. m. At intervals throughout the day an auction will be run with many lovely articles going under the hammer. Members of the branch have donated their original work, including pictures, etchings and poems. For sale will be Christmas cards, hand-hammered silver ornaments, and many books written by Pen Women.

At the food table, one will find baked beans, salads, pickles, cakes, cookies, jellies, and other good things.

Master of ceremonies for the day is Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, whose newest book, "Trooper, U. S. Army Dog," will be featured on the book table. Mrs. Beatrice Harreld Sparks will be cashier, and auctioneers will include Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch and Dr. Winifred Willard.

Presiding over the war stamp and bond booth will be Mrs. Rosamond Gaydash, whose war activities committee is responsible for so many fine things being done for the ceremonial detachment at Fort Meyer.

Others Who Will Help

Mrs. Edna Webb Miles will have charge of the art table and Mrs. Ivy Lindsley Hoagland will preside over the book table. Mrs. Ida Elaine James is chairman of the poetry table and also will take a stint at the fortune-telling booth. Mrs. Ellamay Colvin Thomas will sell the homemade foods at the food table and Miss Ann Singleton and Mrs. Lily Hunt will take their turns at fortune telling.

HOW TO CAMOUFLAGE THE STUDIO COUCH

The simplest way to make a wide studio couch into a comfortable bed for daytime use is to build bookshelves out from the wall but with the lowest one so placed that the studio couch can slide in under it. This makes the couch narrower for use and gives a substantial back rest for the cushions.

The lower shelves can have a hinged front that drops down to make a storage compartment if you don't need them for books. At the same time, add side shelves to serve as end tables for the couch.—ELIZABETH MAC RAE BOYKIN

Changes in Civilian Life Offer Challenge to Doctors

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

The civilian doctor who goes into military or naval service finds himself in a new world. Not only is he up against a whole new way of life, new disciplines and new routines, but he begins the handling of patients the like of which he has never seen before.

How many civilian surgeons had any experience prior to 1942 in the treatment of gunshot wounds? How many civilian physicians have had any experience in tropical diseases? I can assure you that the answer to both questions is: Very few.

The medical colleges and the medical departments of the Army and Navy are preparing for the new crop of doctors for this experience.

In my own school, at least 90 per cent of the medical students are in Army or Navy uniforms. An Army officer and a Navy officer are stationed in one of the school buildings and the "cadets" are taught drill and other forms and features of Army and Navy life.

Tropical Diseases Studied

For the first time in its history this school now has a course in tropical diseases. The most casual review of the faculty showed that no member had any knowledge of the subject, so a faculty member was sent to Tulane University, New Orleans, to take a course and he has now returned and is teaching junior and senior students the features of those tropical diseases which they are likely to see on the outposts of the world.

But the war has affected civilian life and the civilian physician's habits of practice. One of the New York clinics reports that since the war has hits its stride and our own boys are in it, there is a notable increase in cases of activity of the thyroid gland among the civil populations.

Mothers, wives, sisters, fathers and brothers think and brood over some fellow who who may be under gunfire or worse. It has been well known for years that the nervous system stimulates the thyroid gland and it in turn stimulates the nervous system over again, and a vicious circle is established.

Surgeon's Experience

The story is told of a London surgeon who was called on to treat an air-raid victim. The X-ray showed that an unexploded aircraft shell was imbedded in the tissues of his thigh. The bomb squad experts recognized it as an armor-piercing projectile which might explode any minute.

This surgeon and his assistants were game and finally removed the high-explosive package safely in what a colleague described as "the most delicate and dangerous operation of his career."

Fortunately in the United States the civilian surgeon has not yet been called on to treat gunshot wounds and it is to be hoped that he never will. But the general aspects of his practice have undergone great changes, nevertheless, due to the war.
